BLADES of BLUEGRASS

By Jack Wild

Erich Dombrowski is a promoted German journalist who a short time ago came to this country under the International Exchange Program of the State Department, and while here he visited the University of Kentucky. Now UK President H. L. Donovan has received an article the editor wrote for one of his three newspapers. It is entitled "Das Land der blauen Grasser." Which means "The Land of the Blue Grass." Translated by Prof. John H. Uizen, the article reads, in part, like this:

"Hardly has one lost the strong confusion of Detroit, the rasoning noise of its very extensive auto factories which surround this city of a million for miles, and already after less than two hours of riding, the airplane, gently descending, lands on a carpet of seemingly endless landscape. We are in Lexington. One takes a deep breath and inhales, literally, nature in its simplicity. Here it is cool; here it is lonely; here can one in meditation follow the slight veil of clouds in the sky. Is that also America? Yes it is: Kentucky.

"Kentucky belongs, territorially seen, still to the Southern States. In reality, it is that, however, no longer. One can neither count it as belonging to the east nor the west, nor the central part ... Once it was a part of the French colonial area which contended from Canada along the Mississippi Valley to the Gulf of Mexico. A number of names still suggest this old time and even though the French vernacular has long died out, the English-American language has also crossed the last trace. Only Louisville, named after Ludwig, the sun king, the economic center of the area has preserved the French pronunciation. If one, on the other hand, goes to Versailles and Paris, two tiny little cities, one already has give the English pronunciation of these words in order to be understood ...

"The educational center of Kentucky is Lexington. The University, a pretty garden spot of colleges, dormitories, athletic halls, and libraries, is in the midst of resplendent parks, a world of peace in it, and ... (The) fresh and mentally refreshing wind which moves throughout the University, also meets us in the landscape in which the University is set—meadows upon meadows, as far as the eye can see, columns of trees, floating little woods in the distance, everything so clean and clear, so well arranged in the silvery atmosphere. America at its best ... (but) the real lords of these expanses and these meadows are the horses: in gigantic enclosures, they enjoy themselves as in paradise ...

"The sunny landscape of Kentucky radiates like a spring breath of future good times. When May comes gradually to an end, the grass develops tiny blue blossoms and the meadows appear in a bluish, glittery enchantment. This is Kentucky, in the language of the people called the land of the Blue Grass, and when an American speaks of it, his heart becomes warm, his face radiant."

Twenty-five homemakers in Carroll county took part in a tour to Cincinnati to visit the Taft Museum, Rookwood pottery and the Kroger Foundation.

No reactors were found in TB tests given to 750 cows on farms in Mercer county.

The Garden

By John S. Gardner, University Of Kentucky

A house-cellar storage room for vegetables may be ventilated by the same principle as an outside cellar or cave, this is, with a system that provides both intake and outlet vents.

The outlet may be an outside cellar window set close to the ceiling line of the room. The intake is an opening made by cutting off a few inches of the lower edge of the door that leads to the rest of the cellar. The area of the storage room is in square feet.

When there is an outside entrance to the storage room, as a stairway, a door should be set in the cellar-wall opening, a strip of appropriate width having been set to the lower edge of the door. The air that rolls down the steps will enter through this opening at the floor line. The strip should be hinged for closing between ventilation periods and a thermometer kept at hand at all times for checking the temperature, particularly at the floor line, as it is colder there such a system can chill the room very rapidly in mid-winter.

Sweating of vegetables, or an odor of mustiness or mildiness, is a sign that ventilation is needed. In early fall the ventilation system may be used for cooling the room by opening the vents at sundown and closing them at dawn, the temperature sometimes being changed as much at 15 or 20 degrees.

More Exchangees To See Kentucky

More International Farm Youth Exchangees will be in Kentucky this fall to live with farm families from a few days to two weeks, it is announced from the 4-H Club Department of the UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Bengt-Eric Norrman of Sweden will go first to the John Moody family in Henry county. His chief interests are cattle, 4-H clubs and farm cooperatives.

James Thomas of Wales will visit the families of R. D. Gibson, Spencer county, and R. R. Moore, Washington county. He is interested in cooperative marketing and grass farming.

From Switzerland, Jean-Claude Devenoge will study general farm tasks operations at Herbert Von Gruenigen's in Lincoln county and on the Richard Hamilton farm in Graves county.

Pentti Lindsburg, Finland, will be the sojourning familiar. Lawrence Newson, Floyd county, Floyd Tuchnor, Spencer county, and Jack Dye, Fleming county.

A Belgian youth, Robert Snick, will be with the Robert Davis and Walter Davies and Gordon Moody families in Edmonson county and at the home of Roy Wilson in Trigg county.

'Kentucky Afield' Weekly On TV

"Kentucky Afield", an outdoor program heard throughout the state on radio and previously seen on television once a month, is now seen weekly on one Kentucky TV station. Two other stations carry a monthly television program.

WAVE-TV, Louisville, started the weekly program last Sunday. It is to be seen each Sunday from 5:15 to 5:30, central standard time. The program consists of a short film on a wildlife subject and a discussion of the subject by a guest expert and a two-man panel.

WEHT, Henderson, and WSM-TV, Nashville, carry a half-hour television show once a month on the same pattern. In addition, 36 Kentucky stations carry the "Kentucky Afield" radio series which has a show every two weeks.

The programs are sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. Ronnie Rhody is master of ceremonies on all shows.

Two Students At UK Win Special Awards

Two University of Kentucky engineering students with upper classmen—have been awarded one-year scholarships to UK through a foundation found established by the Armco Steel Corporation.

Recipients of the grants, both for $500, are James A. Burka, senior of Danville, and Robert J. Hogg, senior of Huntington, W. Virginia.

Under terms of the new program, scholarship winners must be engaged in the study of metallurgical engineering at the University.

Research For Navy Is Completed At UK

The University of Kentucky's Department of Electrical Engineering has just completed a $30,000 research and development project for the U. S. Navy.

Technical equipment designed during the two-year research period has been moved from the UK campus to the U. S. Naval Ordnance Research Laboratory, White Oak, Maryland, where University electrical engineers will install it.

Dr. Nathan B. Allison, professor of electrical engineering, was project supervisor, and Dr. H. A. Romanowitz, head of the Department of Electrical Engineering, served as project director.

University Press Issues Anthology

The University of Kentucky Press has just published a book entitled 'Kentucky Story,' a collection of short stories. This collection of 15 stories is edited by Dr. Hollis Summers, Kentucky writer and member of the Department of English at the University.

Pulitzer prize winners Robert Penn Warren and A. B. Guthrie Jr. are among contributors to the work. Almost 70 years of Kentucky history, beginning with James Lane Allen's "King Solomon of Kentucky," first published in 1891, are represented.

Other writers with stories in the anthology are Lucy Furman, John Fox Jr., Alice Hegan Rice, Irvin S. Cobb, Ben Lucien Burman, Elizabeth Roberts, Caroline Gordon, Allen Tate, Leane Zugsmith, Jesse Stuart, James Still and Elizabeth Hardwick.

Farm, Home Program Brings Improvements

Todd county farmers enrolled in the Farm and Home Improvement Program of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics reported their progress to County Agent J. Stanley Howard.

All enrolled farmers tested their soils and fertilized according to needs, Howard noted. They grew recommended varieties and followed suggestions for shallow cultivation. Eolen Burns obtained the county agent just after he began to plow washtub corn the second time. In a few minutes, the agent convinced him he did not need to plow the corn again.

James Jackson reported the best crops he ever grew, due, he said, to information on fertilization which he received in Farm and Home Development Program classes.

Leonard Thomas said it was not hard to understand why he had good crops. He purchased 78,000 pounds of phosphate, 2,000 pounds of nitrate and 3,000 pounds of potash.

W. L. Gardner used 50,000 pounds of phosphate. He plans to use enough more to make 1,000 pounds of 28 percent phosphate an acre on 90 acres of cropland.

Film Name To Be The Kentuckian

A decision to name a motion picture, presently being filmed at various parts of the state, "The Kentuckian" was announced by the producers shortly after Governor Wetherby gave his approval to the title.

The Hecht-Lancaster association, producers of the film, sought the Governor's endorsement in a telegram which stated, "We hope this motion picture will prove worth of the natural beauty of this state and the hospitality of its people."

Starring in the film will be Burt Lancaster, who will also be its director.

Wetherby expressed himself as pleased that the company has chosen to put the name of the state in the movie.

"The producers have done great honor and every Kentuckian will take pride in this opportunity to advance our name and to show movie-goers the beauties of our state, the Governor said.

"The name is especially fitting because the film is based on a book by a Kentuckian and adapted for the screen by another Kentuckian."

The picture is based on the book, "The Gabriel Horn," by the late Felix Holt, a native of Calloway County. A. B. (Bud) Guthrie, formerly of Lexington, wrote the screen play.

Filming of the movie is now in progress in Levi Jackson Wilderness Road and Cumberland Falls State Parks and other sites in Southeastern Kentucky. Such a request work is to be done in northeastern in the western part of the state.

National Honors For Shelby Girl

Miss Claudette Moss of Shelby county, sophomore at the University of Kentucky, will be one of two 4-H members in the United States to attend the ninth annual National Conference on Citizenship in Washington, D. C., Sept. 15 to 18.

About 800 organizations will be represented at the conference to be attended by approximately 1,200 men, women and young people.

Miss Moss has been a 4-H club member for nine years, winning county, district and state honors. She represented the 4-H clubs of the state at the Governor's Conference on Children and Youth and in 1952 was state leadership champion.

Clark Woman Makes Kitchen Convenient

Mrs. David Huls of Clark county has been quick to adopts many of the suggestions given in her home economics club on making a kitchen convenient. Two 3-way switches have been installed near the mixing center and sink, affording excellent light without extra steps, noted Mrs. Lucile Warren, UK home demonstration agent. Mrs. Huls stores her small electrical equipment where it will be convenient for the job at hand.

A table on wheels and a stool the right height are near the mixing center, as Mrs. Huls makes it a practice to sit while working whenever possible. She has arranged one corner of the large kitchen as a rest area, and now is planning a business center for taking care of household affairs.

A member of the Progressive Homemakers Club, Mrs. Huls has been the home management leader the past year.

TV NOTEBOOK

By: Gene Clinkenbeard

With billions of words already poured out concerning color TV, we're going to add a few more—only relating to the technical side as we see it.

Although from time to time we've felt that color on a general scale is closer than two elephants in a phone booth, it's quite obvious that the complexity of the color age will call its mass acceptance until, say, mid-1956.

Color calls for handling a vastly more complicated signal than for black-and-white with the margin for error reduced to virtually zero. Microwave relays and coaxial cables will require much added facilities and stations, too, will have to provide for the proper handling of this medium of telecasting. Color camera chains, slide and film equipment, and lighting will provide problems which will have to be worked out by the technicians handling the transmitting end.

All in all, the industry has gone a long way toward licking some mighty perplexing problems and it's our humble opinion that when the business of color telecasting is ready to go—it'll prove to be something well worth having waited for.

And the latest model MOTOROLA has been well worth waiting for too! The Miraculous MOTOROLA combines handsome design and superb engineering at an unbeatable price! Come to GENE'S TELEVISION to see the TV set that is FIRST in Features, FIRST in Sales and FIRST in Styling . . . the MOTOROLA!

Irrigation System Designed On Farm

How Hayden Thompson, a mechanically minded farmer, rigged up an irrigation system for tobacco is told by Floyd F. Thompson, senior assistant county agent in Daviess county.

He drove a well at the edge of his tobacco field and installed a jet pump that was originally used for his home-water supply. He then hooked this pump to a pipe from his larger pump in the house and started an irrigation system for his four-acre tobacco field.

Other equipment included pipe that he had on the farm plus 300 feet of plastic pipe. The only equipment purchased was five sprinkler heads for about $25.

New Territory

Trimble County's Fiscal Court filed a petition in Franklin Circuit Court asking that several thousand acres of land long since claimed by Henry County, for 117 years without hindrance or dispute, be adjudged to be a portion of the former county.

It is claimed that reassessment of the county recently brought to light the disputed acreage which, according to the act establishing Trimble County, actually belong to it . . . rather than Henry County. The controversy will be presented to Franklin Circuit Judge W. B. Ardery for decision.

Lunch Funds To Be Less

Kentucky's apportionment of funds under the National School Lunch program for the coming school year will be $1,880,904—or $70,333 less than for the previous year—James L. Patton, chief of the Bureau of Vocational Education, Frankfort, reported today.

Patton explained that the decrease in funds was based on a formula with several factors, but is chiefly because Kentucky's per capita income increased during the base period to a greater extent than did the national per capita income, while its school-age population did not increase as great a per centage as the national school age population.

The United States Office of Education notified Patton's office of the reduced grant.

Dog Tag Sales Lag In Some Sections

Although 83,000 dog tags have been distributed by this Department thus far, Waddell Catlett, Dog Law Administrator, reports that some areas of the State are very slow in complying with the law in appointing dog wardens to start selling license. Agriculture Commissioner Ben S. Adams, whose Department is charged with the supervision of this law, pointed out that the law as enacted by the 1954 General Assembly states that it is the responsibility of each county fiscal court to appoint a dog warden to conduct the sale of licenses and catch stray dogs.

Rhoads remarked that it is to the interest of all farmers and property owners in the Commonwealth to urge that their respective fiscal courts set up an effective licensing and stray dog collection system in the counties, for the law states that only persons who do not own a dog and those dog owners that have their dogs properly licensed have valid claims for reimbursement for bodily, property, or livestock and poultry damage caused by dogs. Consequently, in counties where no licenses are sold, or only a small per centage of the dogs are licensed, the citizens of those counties cannot fully share in the monetary benefits afforded by the Kentucky Livestock Fund. Of the $1.50 proceeds of each license sold, 25 cents is retained by the dog warden as his fee, 50 cents is credited to the county where the license is issued for operating the program, and the 75 cent balance is deposited with the State Treasury to satisfy claims for damages as the result of action by dogs. Only persons that have their dogs licensed or those persons that do not own dogs may receive such benefits from this fund.

This Department may receive claims for property and livestock and poultry damage now but the law does not permit the payment of any claims until July 1, 1955.

Rhoads reports that more than 80 counties have appointed dog wardens to date. He is now visiting the counties in Eastern Kentucky and will have contacted every county judge and fiscal court in the State by September 15.

The following nine counties are making splendid progress in licensing and inoculation of their dogs: Jefferson County has sold more than 10,000 tags to date; Jackson County has issued 2,000 tags; Crittenden has issued 1,500 tags; Logan has sold 1,200 tags; Clark has sold about 1,200; Muhlenberg has issued 1,600 tags; the Pulaski warden has sold more than 3,000 tags; Hart County has distributed 1,500 licenses; Franklin Jin has sold 1,500 tags; and Lincoln County has issued approximately 1,000 tags.
