CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

How the law of divine Love revealed by Christ Jesus offers mankind redemption from sin and limitation will be set forth at Christian Science services Sunday in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Doctrine of Atonement."

Selections to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will include the following (19:6): "Jesus aided in reconciling man to God by giving man a truer sense of Love, the divine Principle of Jesus' teachings, and this truer sense of Love redeems man from the law of matter, sin, and death by the law of Spirit,—the law of divine Love."

The Golden Text is from Mark (10:45): "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

The laying accommodations at Kentucky state parks will open for the vacation season on May 1, according to an announcement by Henry Ward, State Commissioner of Conservation.

The parks are Audubon State Park, Henderson, General Butler State Park, Carrollton, Pennyrile Forest State Park, Dawson Springs, Natural Bridge State Park, Slade, Carter Caves State Park, Olive Hill and Cherokee State Park, Hardin. All but Carter Caves and General Butler will have dining facilities opening the same time.

Four other state parks, Kentucky Dam Village, Gilbertsville; Kentucky Lake State Park, Hardin; Cumberland Falls State Park, Corbin and Lake Cumberland State Park, Jamestown, remain open throughout the year.

Ward announced that swimming will be available on weekends during May if weather permits. Swimming facilities will be open full time beginning Memorial Day.

New facilities this year include horseback riding at Pennyrile Forest and Kentucky Lake State Parks with additional tennis and shuffleboard courts being constructed at the latter park. Children's facilities have been added at Lake Cumberland State Park and Cumberland State Park, Jamestown, remain open throughout the year.

Seeks Pennies For Chapel

March 20 saw the opening of a campaign by the office of the Chaplain of the Kentucky State Reformatory, LaGrange, for the purpose of raising funds to build a chapel at the institution.

James H. Longacre, chaplain, states, "The response to this notion gave us a real send-off by donating 10,500 pennies. If these men who earn eight cents a day are so generous, I am sure our friends throughout the state will see us through this Penny Parade."

Contributions should be sent to "Chapel Fund, Kentucky State Reformatory, LaGrange, Ky.

Contours Work On Moderate Slopes

Contour cultivation should be depended on to control erosion on slopes of only 2 to 3 percent, says the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. On steeper slopes, terraces should be used.

However, it may be wise to use contour cultivation to reduce erosion of cropland until a system of terraces can be made.

"Contour cultivation will reduce soil losses by half as measured in tons an acre and increase the amount of water absorbed by the soil," it is stated. "Contour cultivation increases corn yields by five bushels an acre and tobacco by not less than 125 pounds an acre. On rolling land the cost of operating machinery and power equipment in contour cultivation is less than when the rows are planted straight."

Sheep raisers in Pendleton county are planning to enlarge their flocks with north-western Hampshire-cross yearlings or ewe lambs.

Photographic Show On Display At UK

An exhibition of 187 American photographs is now being shown in the corridor gallery of the University of Kentucky Fine Arts Building, and all interested Kentuckians are invited to view the display. This exhibition, organized by the editors of Life Magazine, is titled "Memorable Life Photographs" and consists of photographs published in the magazine's pages at one time or another during the first 15 years of its existence (1936-1951).

Multiflora Roses Make Useful Fence

A multiflora rose fence will keep livestock at home, and it will last well at home, too! So says a newly revised leaflet by the U. S. Department of Agriculture which describes how and where to plant the multiflora rose, its advantages and disadvantages, and its cultural requirements.

Use of living multiflora rose fences has been increasing rapidly in recent years, according to Howard G. Tilson of the University of Kentucky. They are cheap, long-lasting, and effective in keeping farm animals and attract wildlife. Many recently made suggestions for soil conservation and stream control are being tried out after 15 years of trials and experiences by farmers working with the Soil Conservation Service and other conservation agencies.

Multiflora rose should not be confused with hedges of Osage orange, says Mr. Tilson. Rose fences do not grow tall enough to shade adjacent farm crops or to require trimming when used a long farm fields. Their roots are not widespread enough to reduce crop yields, and the rose thorns are not long enough to puncture tractor tires.

Rose fences are suitable for contour fences between cropland and permanent pasture and between cropland fields used for rotational grazing. They and better land use by keeping livestock from large gullies, eroding streambanks, farm-pond areas, and woodlands.

Multiflora rose fences are not recommended for farm use, because of the space they would occupy—8 to 10 feet in height and width—though on suburban lots larger than ½ acre they may be useful as a barrier at the rear of the lot.

Copies of the leaflet may be had from offices of county agents or by writing to the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, U. of K., Lexington.

Weekly Recipe

An interesting way to serve hamburger is with a flavorful dressing, says Miss Florence Infry, foods specialist at the University of Kentucky. It is good planning to include other oven dishes in the menu.

Hamburger Casserole

1 1/2 lb. hamburger
1 1/2 t salt
1/2 c cut-up celery
1/2 c water
1 t oregano or thyme
1/4 t pepper
1 egg
2/3 c milk
1 c cornbread crumbs
1/3 c chopped onion

1 1/2 c canned tomatoes

Mix meat with 1 teaspoon salt and place half the amount in a greased casserole. Top with a layer of dressing made of cooked celery, seasonings, beaten egg, milk, cornbread and soft bread crumbs. Add the second layer of meat and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 minutes. Then add finely chopped onions and tomatoes and bake another half hour.

Menu: Hamburger casserole, glazed carrots, buttered broccoli, gelatine vegetable salad, rolls, butter and baked apple with cream.
