New Chemical To Control Wildfire In Tobacco Beds

Streptomycin, a new chemical we obtain more experience in the use and the material is also available. Results look very promising. Because wildfire has caused tremendous losses in plant beds during the past several years, many growers are looking with interest to this new material which will be sold in the form of a wettable powder.

The cost of applying streptomycin will be somewhat higher than using bluestone lime and it will not necessarily replace the use of bluestone lime this year because it should be used extensively in this county. Streptomycin will be used as a preventive of wildfire and as a material to eradicate the disease once it appears.

When used as a preventive, the material should be applied weekly and probably applied without four applications. With the material available in several strengths, it should be applied according to the directions of the manufacturer.

has been found effective for controlling wildfire in tobacco beds. This new material has been used primarily in fighting infection and bacterial control in humans and animals, but it is also been found effective to control certain plant diseases. A number of streptomycin is used in control of plant diseases and therefore less expensive than that used in humans and other animals. Rather extensive experimental work has been done with this new material in Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee and the results have been very outstanding in the control of wildfire. A limited amount of this new chemical has been made available to W. T. Straw, county agent, for experimental use and the material is also available through local merchants. It is suggested by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station that the use of this new material should be considered on an experimental basis this year until

The stock report on the local market for Tuesday, April 26, is as follows:

Hogs — Shoats $13.50; sows and pigs $5.00 to 206.00.

Cattle—Cows $9.60 to 10.90; cows and calves 135.00 down; stock cattle 65.00 to 86.00; bulls 165.00 down.

From recent tabulations there will be approximately 900 acres in Nicholas County to be diverted from tobacco in 1955.

This is assuming the referendum carries for a continuation of the present support program, election to be held April 28.

In this event tobacco growers will be interested in the use of a cash crop to replace tobacco acreage that are to be diverted.

An adult farmers meeting will be held at the Nicholas County High school on Thursday night, April 28, at 8 o'clock C.S.T. for the purpose of determining how to use such acres.

It is thought there is at least a "partial" solution that will be used as a topic at the above meeting.

All farmers interested in tobacco are urged to attend.

Spring bean deliveries to pond owners who already have received a stocking of bluegill began in the eastern section of the state on Wednesday, April 27.
