To Show Crop Tests

Improved silage crops, tobacco, corn, hays and grasses will be seen at the annual Agronomy Field Day at the University of Kentucky Experiment Station at Lexington Aug. 12.

Stressing the importance of more and better feed for livestock, the University is testing varieties of sudan grass, corn, sorghum, grasses and legumes for filling silos.

Experiments also are being conducted to test hybrid corns for grain yields. The trials have gone far enough to warrant recommendation of three Kentucky hybrids as well as several others.

The experimental tobacco to be seen Aug. 12 includes low-nicotine varieties, in which there is much interest. There also will be varieties resistant to diseases, and tests with different rotations and in fertilizer applications.

Other crop experiments include varieties of soybeans and of sorghums for grain and for sirup.

The program will begin at 9 a.m., Central Standard. Time, at the Judging Pavilion on the Experiment Station farm.

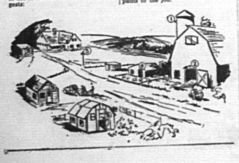
Good Lighting Not Hit Or Miss Job—It Must Be Planned; Guide Is Given

BY IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Good lighting is not a hit or miss job. It must be planned. And this goes for the farm, particularly, where scores of after-dusk accidents happen regularly because of poor illumination.

A dark farmyard can be a pretty formidable place in which to take a walk. It becomes even more dangerous when the farmer is hurrying to do the chores or when following a long winter day. All of us work better, farther and safer if we can see what we're doing, and where we're going.

A combination of conventional floodlights and floodlights for locations over entrances to service buildings and a cluster with a reflector on a yard pole to light up areas beyond buildings can do an adequate exterior illumination job. As a guide to how this can be accomplished we refer to the illustration below, which suggests:



Floodlights on edg, near top of silo (1), cluster of three floodlights mounted on pole for three-directional general yard lighting (2);

Conventional yard lights over entrance to dairy barn (3), and over entrance to poultry house (3)—in foreground; as

Floodlights as conventional yard-lights, whichever is more efficient for individual farm layouts, at entrance to hog house (4); at the three other his 3 locations shown—poultry house, utility building and garage ...as well as entrances to such buildings as machine shed, farm shop, milk house, drive-through granary and storage structures.

The illustrations represent general recommendations only—but they are tied directly to nation-wide safety statistics that prove emphatically that injuries can be prevented and work speeded up if farmers will follow the simple practice of putting plenty of light on the job—and lighting their paths to the job.

American Legion Auxiliary Entertains

The American Legion Auxiliary entertained with a 7-o'clock tea Thursday, August 11, at Rock Haven, in honor of the 15 past presidents of the Unit. Mrs. Henry Peters, the president presided.

Mrs. G. T. Cowan and Miss Ernestine Eads were in charge of the interesting program, and entertainment for the evening.

The centerpiece for the table was an arrangement of white gladioli, in honour of the Gold Star members, Mrs. Bertha L. Wood-Mrs. Bluntin and Mrs. tables, but not in the furnace room, as that would be too warm. The Garden

A house cellar can provide extraordinary storage for "cool" vegetables. Forty degrees is considered right for apples and will hold unsprouted for 4 months, or even 6 months, if sprout inhibitor is used. Save Time Priming Burley

"How to Save Time in Priming Burley Tobacco" is the title of a leaflet which farmers may obtain free from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. It is one of the "easier ways to do farm work" series of publications which the college has prepared in the interest of reducing the cost of farm production.

Over 20 man-hours of work an acre were saved by farmers in Central Kentucky who used the method of priming burley tobacco described in this leaflet.

Youth Exhibits For State Fair

Exhibits of clothing, canned foods and home-baked and home-made furnishings will feature the 4-H club contribution to the Kentucky State Fair at Louisville Sept. 9 to 17.

The clothing division is expected to display about 1,000 garments from 80 counties. The canning exhibit, 950 jars from 45 counties baked foods, 500 exhibits from 25 counties, frozen foods, 500 exhibits from 15 counties, and home furnishings, 100 exhibits from 20 counties.

Representing 4-H club work throughout the state, these articles will be included in the University of Kentucky's exhibits in the Grandstand B-Bldg.

Teams from 75 to 100 counties will take part in contests in the judging of beef and dairy cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry. The state champion teams will enter national contests.

Tractor-driving for 4-Hers will be another feature of the junior events.

The adult exhibits by the University will include electric lighting for handling tobacco. The same improved lights will be used for operations in processing tobacco—stripping, sorting, grading and the like.

Other exhibits will include the control of tobacco diseases, dairying, beef production, poultry raising, and the value of good seeds.

Quick Handling Helps Home-Grown Sweet Corn

There's a reason why home-grown sweet corn on the cob tastes better than most corn bought at a market, says Mrs Pearl Hoak, extension leader of the University of Kentucky. The secret is a quick trip from the garden to the boiling water. Plan ahead, before the sugar has time to change to starch. Why spoil the fun by having place the ears in boiling water a quick cook for 10 minutes.
