No End In Sight

"Rural Revolution" is the title of an article by James N. Wallace, appearing in the Wall Street Journal. It tells of an Illinois farmer and how technological developmts have brought a "dramatic increase" in man-hour production, and at the same time have sharply increased his harvests.

Increased use of fertilizers and improvements in plant breeding have been factors in this. So has modern farm machinery. In 1933, it took four or five men and 20 horses to farm this farmer's 420 acres. Now two men do it—and do it better. Mr. Wallace quotes the farmer as saying, "We used to cultivate corn with horses most of the summer. Now we get it done in three or four days. With a tractor, one can cultivate 60 to 70 acres a day. With a horse, it took a good man to cultivate 15 acres a day." Mr. Wallace observes, "As farm equipment makers introduce new and improved models, no end seems in sight to the cost-cutting, productivity-boosting benefits to farmers."

In 1919 there were 246,000 tractors on U. S. farms—now there are more than 4,500,000. As recently as just before World War II there were 300,000 combines—now there are 1,000,000. Big increases have been registered for all other varieties of farm machinery. That's one of the main reasons why a declining farm population has been able to provide more food and better food for a swiftly increasing total population.

Visualizing The National Debt

The national debt is owed, in part, by every American family. It amounts to a first lien on all our national assets.

The magnitude of that debt is graphically pictured by the Tax Foundation. Suppose we took the total annual paychecks of every one of the 55,000,000 people who work in our factories, businesses and farms. Suppose we added to that the pay of the 7,000,000 civilians on government payrolls and the 3,000,000 people in the armed forces. Suppose we then added such extras as all the social security payments made by employers. That would total $209,000,000,000—which is some $70,000,000,000 less than the national debt!

The United States Poll

'Public Confidence In Nation's Business, Job Prospects Continues

BY KENNETH FINK

Director, Princeton Research Service

Princeton, New Jersey—Confidence in the nation's business and job prospects is greater today than it has been at any time during the past year and a half.

A United States Poll survey just completed shows that a solid majority of the American public expect more or the same amount of business and jobs for the nation during the next few years than it had during the past year or two.

At the same time, about three in every eight in the nation expect less business and fewer jobs.

These were the findings when United States Poll staff reporters asked a representative cross-section of the nation's adult public:

"How do you feel about business conditions in this state for the next year? Do you think there'll be more business and more jobs than during the past year or two, or less business and fewer jobs?"

These were the nationwide results:

More or about the same	59%
More	29%
Same	30%
Less	37%
No opinion	4%

Three months ago, 58 per cent expected more or the same amount of business and jobs, 38 per cent expected less, 4 per cent had no opinion.

Survey findings reveal that people living in the East are a bit more optimistic about business and job prospects than are those living in other areas of the country.

At the same time, a solid majority in each section of the country sees the same or more business and jobs ahead.

	New England	East-West	Rocky Mt.	Pacific
More or the same	62%	58%	59%	57%
Less	33%	38%	36%	40%
No opinion	5%	4%	5%	3%

A comparison of today's survey findings with those of previous United States Poll surveys findings on the same question brings out these important facts.

1. The American public is more optimistic today about business and job prospects in the nation than it has been at any time since October, 1953— a year and a half ago.

2. Rank and file America, however, is not quite so optimistic about business and job conditions as it was during the period between December, 1952, and October, 1953.

3. Today's survey findings gave definite evidence that people across the U. S. A. are not expecting any great upswing in unemployment in the immediate future.

Here is the trend since December, 1952:

	More or same	Less	No opinion
December, 1952 March, 1953 (two years ago)	70%	15	15
	71%	17	12
July, 1953	65%	32	3
October, 1953	60%	34	6
December, 1953	53%	42	5
April, 1954 One year ago	52%	43	5
June, 1954	54%	41	5
October, 1954	57%	39	4
December, 1954	58%	38	4
TODAY	59%	37	4

Since December, 1947, Princeton Research Service has been making periodic measurements on people's outlook on future business and job conditions in various parts of the nation and in the U. S. as a whole.

During that time, there has been a close correlation between the answers people have given and the actual business and job conditions in the areas measured.

The Carlisle Mercury presents the reports of the United States Poll exclusively in this area.

Rain Causes Heavy Damage In County; Nicholas Countians Pass Road Bond Issue

Thursday, March 28, 1935

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

By Gil Kingsbury

Tribute To An Editor:

Congressman Bill Natcher from Kentucky's Second District had this tribute inserted in the Congressional Record:

Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to a newspaper editor, a dispense news with sincerity and truth, to make the community a better place in which to live. He always left the column of his paper open to other editors, often leading to hot debate, but always working for a better community.

The editor? Jack Minton, the editor of the Edmonson County News, Brownsville, Ky.

The Prisoner

Kentucky's princess for the annual Cherry Blossom Festival is Miss Ann Covington Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Porter, who are expected here for festivities when Kids from Lexington, Winchester and vice versa.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter are at a recent meeting of the Kentucky Society of Washington, D. C., and will be a chance to be spectators of the big event.

Incidentally, there's an election in Washington pretty soon—the Kentucky Society is getting ready to solicit officers for next year.

The Fight

There's a brighter side to the late and unfamiliar Ohio River Flood. If it is in Washington, there's new force behind the plan to get more money for protection for Catlettsburg. And the same muddy tide that engulfed parts of Dayton has brought with it louder and new demands for Dayton. Bad

Everytime you can prove damages, you get a better chance for help from Uncle Sam. The last flood provided that new proof of damage.

This 'n That:

The New Congressional Directory is out. Longest biography belongs to Senator Albert Barkley, Senator Earle C. Clements, Rep. Brent Spence and Rep. Noble Gregory have the shortest. Reply to Harrison County reader: Kentucky has only eight congressmen because we have not kept pace with other states in population growth. Answer to Galatin County writer: Our guess is that at least four, maybe five, of the Kentucky Democrats in Congress will support Bert Combs although most of them will make no announcement. To Greenup County letter-writer: If you favor the Library Services Bill, write your congressman, Brent Spence. House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C. Many Parent-Teacher Association leaders are writing.

Build That School

Last week I appeared before the House Committee on Education and Labor and testified in behalf of my bill which would provide Federal assistance for the construction of schools. I personally feel it is time we quit playing with statistics and started building more schools. There is already a shortage of 340,000 school rooms. This shortage is well known to the concerned parent, the over-worked school teacher, and the abused student. The only way to meet this shortage is to build that school!

Yalta

This past week the controversy raging in Washington, and one having its repercussions in the capitals of Europe, has been the unsigned and unilateral release of the Yalta papers by Mr. Dulles and his State Department.

Actually the release of the Yalta papers disclosed no agreements which had not already become public knowledge during the ten years since the Yalta meetings February 4-11, 1945. The four important and long known decisions of Yalta were: The division of Germany into occupation zones, the concessions in China to Russia in return for Russia's participation in the war against Japan, the pledge for democratic elections in Poland, and the agreement to call a conference for drafting the United Nations Charter.

Damage Done

The real damage in the Yalta agreements lay in the release of the memoranda and notes of the extremely personal, off-guard conversations between the "Big Three," and the fact Mr. Dulles released an undigested hatred for the German enemy, and a strong contempt for the Germans. France is right the Germans. The publication of these personal jibes certainly cannot help in abroad today when we are attempting to align French and German sentiment against Russia. And, too, it must be remembered that the release of such personal statements becomes an established practice, it cannot help but damage the free exchange of views at any international conference.

I personally favor the United States publishing fully informed views of United States policy on any international conference. Certainly, the free exchange of political discussions should become a part of our foreign policy. I do not favor secrecy, but not the personal conversations. The release of such personal conversations will tend to discourage our own people in their free exchange of views. I also feel that the public do not believe that the public release of such personal conversations should be used by our political parts in a political weapon. Such a practice publicly embarrasses the opposition.

Republican Hopes Today

It was the right wing of the Republican Party which hoped to use the Yalta papers to show the concessions at Yalta which forced Mr. Dulles to release the papers. I am happy to say this small irresponsible group was disappointed that own Senator Barkley referred to the release at this time as one of the petty partisan political purposes. Unfortunately, the only results of the release have been to increase our own difficulty in unifying the West in its struggle in the cold war.

Presidential Thoughts

In his press conference on March 23, even the President said he was opposed to the Republicans using the Yalta papers as political ammunition in future campaigns. He said the papers should not be published to "prevent blame for success or failure."

It is a shame that the President, whom I think is most correct in this case, does not exercise more power over his own appointees. Mr. Dulles, or more persuasion over his own fellow party members on Capitol Hill, the little band of little men, who forced this incident which rendered the public no new knowledge, gave this own party no new political weapons, and weakened the United State's hand in the cold war.

SUBJECT TO TAXES

Properties of a Masonic Lodge are subject to taxation, since profits derived from these properties are used for fraternal activities and for limited charities, rather than charities that are "purely public" it was held by Assistant Attorney General M. B. Holifield who advised McCracken County officials that such properties are to be taxed.

TV NOTEBOOK

By Gene Clinkenbeard

Small towns and rural areas not yet blessed with television land there are quite a few will find UHF quite a boon. Designed primarily to bring television into fringe areas, Ultra High Frequencies, however, will also give the larger areas to provide an even greater selection and variety of programs.

There are sets on the market equipped to receive in the new UHF band. This doesn't mean, however, that conventional sets are to become as obsolete as colloidal collars. Adapting of 12-channel sets to this new medium can be accomplished in two ways. By use of a so-called strip-converter, which is little more than a plug-in coil, or through the use of a UHF adapter. The adapter is actually a substitute for the regular tuning dial and selects channels 14 and upward.

Of course, a new UHF type antenna will be necessary to complete the job of the adapters. This antenna will be considerably smaller than the present type which currently rides the rooftop of two-thirds of the houses.

Few people realize just how important the proper antenna can be. If you call us, at 71-J, we shall be privileged to come over and see if you are using the type that affords maximum reception . . . your complete satisfaction is the one aim of GENE'S TELEVISION!
