Nixon First Choice Of GOP Voters; Warren Independent's Choice

BY KENNETH FINK, DIRECTOR,

Princeton Research Service

Princeton, New Jersey—The latest United States Poll shows that Vice President Richard M. Nixon is the No. one choice of rank and file Republicans across the U. S. A. Seven out of every twenty Republicans questioned in today's survey say that he is their first choice for the Republican Party Presidential nomination if ike does not run.

Chief Justice Earl Warren ranks next in popularity among GOP voters.

And running third with the nation's GOP voters is former New York State Governor Thomas E. Dewey, closely followed by Harold Stassen and Secretary of State Dulles in that order.

When United States Poll staff reporters presented a list of names to a cross-section of the nation's voters who classify themselves as Republicans and asked:

"Here is a list of men who have been mentioned as possible candidates in 1956 for the Republican Party if Eisenhower is definitely not a candidate. Which one of the men on this list would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate for President in 1956?"

These were the nationwide results:

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

By Gil Kingsbury

Note Of Thanks:

Some figures from the Federal Reserve Board give eastern and northern Kentuckians cause for thanks at this season of the year.

Some 249 new industries have located in the Commonwealth during the past nine years. And more than a third of them—89 to be exact— have located in eastern and northern; Kentucky. None of them were large but every job was taken up helps the area. Boyd, Kenton, and Fayette Counties made substantial gains.

Presidential Notes:

With the 1955 elections out of the way, lines are being drawn for the Presidential campaign of next year.

Some Kentuckians are now getting mail—form mail to be sure—from Senator Kefauver, all of which indicates he's getting ready to announce. In fact, some of his friends have opened a Washington office and have taken a lease on the quarters for the next 18 months.

A Republican Writer:

Lincoln Gould, dean of the Washington political writers, has taken note of the Happy Chandler victory in Kentucky. He writes in the Washing Evening Star that the governor-to-be is a possibity for Vice-President on a ticket headed by Adlai Stevenson.

Other political observers (and has that includes any one who can read and write) also say that a Stevenson-Kefauver ticket is a possibility. Vice-President Nixon still leads the parade on the GOP side of the battle line.

Mail Call:

Note to Bracken County educator, opponents of federal aid to education are suggesting that each state be allowed to keep one per cent of Federal taxes collected within the state.

Reply to Greenup Countian Senator Johnson is expected to be well enough to take over duties as majority leader, thus relieving Senator Clements for other problems.

Although [illegible] expect not much federal aid will be available for new airport development in areas already adequately served.

Memo to Fleming County writer: all members of the lower house and 32 members of the Senate are up for reelection next November.

UK Facilities Viewed By Journalism Group

An inspection team from the American Council on Education for Journalism visited the University of Kentucky campus last week to view general facilities at UK and the institution's School of Journalism in particular. The University has been approved by the ACEJ since the beginning of inspection services, and the School of Journalism has been among the 40 top schools of journalism in the nation for several years.

More than 800 entries were made in the womens department of the Webster county fair.

Tid Bits of Kentucky Folklore

By Dr. Gordon Wilson

"STRANGE MIXTURES"

Dr. Leonard Roberts, of Union College, Barbourville, collector of folktales in the mountains of Kentucky ran into a strange mixture of ancient and modern things, the strangest of all being that it was never necessary to find elec-trical connections to plug in for his tape recorder. Isn't that be a strange combination of ancient and modern? The stories that he recorded are inheritances from the very earliest pioneers and were already centuries old when America itself was recorded. Through many generations these folktales have remained in oral tradition, a very distinctive part of mountain culture. Folkways have changed in some spheres beyond recognition, but the traditional tales have "lingered on."

Just this week I was talking to a very intelligent, youngish man, who has a better-than-average education for his county and his time. In the midst of his talk, unusually poorly good in grammar, he used the word deaf, pronounced as if it had been spelled d-e-a-f. It must have been several generations since that was the accepted pronunciation among people of education. However, a slightly older man spoke not too long ago in the very section where I was visiting, about a concumber tree, out beyond Mayfield magnolia. Dr. Samuel Johnson, whose monumental dictionary appeared just 204 year ago this year, called it that. Undoubtedly the pioneers who settled in south-central Kentucky knew only that pronunciation for a long time. One or two oldsters told me some years ago that he was almost laughed out of school for daring to thought that there was anything queer about having a concumber tree.

As I write this essay, the mere born of a strange cult are getting ready to hold a church service and exhibit the poisonous snake that bit and killed one of their leaders just this week. I wish I could be on hand at this service, for I would like to see how modern the people are in many ways, even though they seem so medieval in others. All of them will come in cars, of course, many of them in Model Ts. Some are mechanics by profession, school-teaching evidently afford They will be on the whole as well dressed as any similar-sized group of religious people, of any church or none.

Also in this very week I heard a prosperous, intelligent man who, I have raised on the farm, declare that planting corn according to the phases of the moon produced certain variations in the height of the stalk. I am afraid that some of our high-priced hybrids will have to take down their tops. Some of these days a farmer will plant these low-growing hybrids in the light of the moon, and he will have to get extension ladders to reach the ears.

Because of several cases of illness in my family this year, I have had considerable contact with hospitals and nursing homes. I have rejoiced because of modern effective ways of dealing with illness. I have had a great build-up in my always strong regard for the medical profession. But I will be willing to bet a good-sized hat that within rifleshot of the hospital or nursing home there are numbers of people who have taken spoack stuff within the last few months that was fully as potent as branch water. Maybe some one, like me afflicted with goiter, has rubbed some harmless colored water on the afflicted parts this very day, some branch water with something added to give it color and smell—the two essentials for a folk medicine. An acquaintance of mine used to lave his goiter daily with some such gop, at a cost of a bottle, even though his basic intelligence seemed far above that his family was and is a very good and respected one. It is possible of course, that I need some of that patented branch water to relieve the swelling in my neck. Maybe it is foolish to try to be modern. Why not lay in a supply of authentic for this winter? And a good-sized quart of canthardes, can certainly take your mind off the pain in your back, especially when the plaster is applied to the tummy. I believe I'll stop and go find a buckeye to tote around to ward off rheumatiz, if I can locate a black smith shop. I can get a horseshoe nail to make into a ring for the little finger, to keep off rheumatiz or heart trouble or liver complaint. It wouldn't cost so much as short of this or that.

Rural Defense Groups Urged By UK Speaker

A Federal Civil Defense Administration official declared last week at the University of Kentucky that all of Kentucky's 120 counties need civil defense organization.

Col William A. Brewer, director of the Tactical Division of the FCDA, Battle Creek, Mich. was a principal speaker at a session of the first statewide Civil Defense Meeting for women. In addition to recommending a defense organization for each county, he advised that such a unit should be divided into urban and rural divisions.

"The Department of Agriculture stands ready to advise rural groups on the protection of their crops against the use of atomic attack," the speaker said.

Poet Robert Frost Addresses UK Group

Robert Frost of Cambridge, Mass., poet of American prose, appeared this week at the University of Kentucky under auspices of the UK Department of English, marking the third time in years that he has delivered a lecture on the campus. The celebrated author read his own poetry and spoke informally before an audience made up of both students and the general public.

Louisville Auditor Addresses Students

The works auditor of a large industrial firm in Louisville spoke last week at the University of Kentucky in a series of lectures arranged by the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce. The speaker, Richard S. Palmer, works auditor of the International Harvester Company plant, told the students of the importance of developing cost accounting techniques to enable individual companies "to better meet competition."

Geological Directory Is Available From UK

The Kentucky Geological Survey has released a publication containing a directory of geological material for use by professional geologists and others in related fields. Authors of the directory are Daniel J. Jones, state geologist, and Preston McGrain, assistant state geologist. Copies of the directory may be obtained from the Survey office located in the University of Kentucky's Mineral Industries Building.

A LITTLE YAPPIN'

By Nellie Crump

On Channel Nine.

Did you see the little acrobatic dancer on your television at 12, our time, Sunday? I wasn't "you all" to meet my very own little cousin, Becky Jones, from down Covington-way, who was judged star of the show. Now only seven years old, Becky has been a television artist since she was four.

Any Port In A Storm.

The sudden change in the weather, Thanksgiving in the air, The Mercury one day ahead of regular time, company, and just plain everyness from a slight (but unmistakable) touch of flu, have slowed this yappin' business down. To fill the space I have swiped the following "chuckle" from last week's Owensville Outlook. Editor Lewis says the source of the yarn is unknown. All the same, it is "Cute as a Cat with Kittens" and fits in here exactly.

"A man, too stingy to subscribe to the hometown paper, sent his little boy to borrow a newspaper. The neighbor he found the boy ran over a stand of bees and, in the confusion, he locked the door. A wart summer squash. His father ran to his assistance and fashing to escape the bees'stings, tripped over and ruined a 59 pair of pants.

"The old man took advantage of the gap in the fence, got into the field and kicked over a growing green corn. Hearing the commotion, his wife ran out, upset a kettle of boiling chicken and a basket of little chickens, drowning the entire batch.

"The baby, being left alone, crawled through the certain into the parlor, running a brand-new $50 carpet. During the excitement a daughter elopped with the hired man, the dog broke up 11 setting hens and the calves got out and chewed the lads off four trees on the chicken lot.

"Moral: Don't borrow your neighbor's paper, it's too risky. Subscribe now."

Yaps—all.

UK Musicale Series Is Open To Public

All of the remaining performances in the University of Kentucky Sunday Afternoon Musicals are open to the public at no charge and all Kentucky high school students invited to hear the various musical groups give their presentations.

UK Provost Explains Functions Of School

Dean Frank G. Ashbaugh announced recently the University of Kentucky and the University of Louisville will conduct members of the Lexington and Louisville Rotary Club work and workshop sessions Friday and Saturday.

Included in his comments was a statement of the University's function, which reads:

"The University of Kentucky is committed to the fact that the UK chemistry faculty in 1953 published more learned articles than did any chemistry department in the Big Ten." He also pointed out that the school's Department of Psychology was the first in the nation to develop a program in clinical psychology of high enough quality to be approved by the U. S. Veterans Administration.

Sandwich Spread

A good sandwich spread for school lunches is made by blending ½ cup of well-drained pineapple, 1 cup of cottage cheese forced through a strainer several times, 2 finely chopped hard cooked eggs and a seasoning of salt and pepper. If necessary a salad dressing to make it of spreading consistency, say home economists at the University of Kentucky.
