Check corn zinc deficiency

What may be zinc deficiency in corn, characterized by yellow streaking when the plants are 8 to 10 inches high, is being checked by Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station agronomists.

The specialists ask that samples of corn and soil from fields showing such symptoms be sent in. Samples also should be collected from a part of the field or nearby field where the corn is healthy.

In severe cases, the leaf tips, margins and sheaths become purple, a broad yellow stripe develops down each side of the leaf, and the pith may have dark splotches at the lower nodes. The plant also is stunted.

The agronomists note these symptoms also might be caused by blue aphids on corn roots and that there may be some relation between the two causes.

County agents have details on how to send the soil and plant samples to Room 213, Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.

425,000 crates of strawberries marketed in Ky. this season

Frankfort, June 15—An excellent strawberry marketing season has just been concluded in Kentucky, C. Harold Bray, director of the Kentucky Division of Markets, has announced. Bray noted that the volume was not only extremely good, but that the price remained strong throughout the season and the markets for the various areas of the state were uniform.

'56 Production Greater

Bray reports that approximately 425,000 crates of berries were produced and sold in Kentucky this year. The volume of berries this year was much better than last year—approximately 110,000 crates were produced in 1956, but the quality this year was inferior. This year the crop ran about 62.5% U. S. No 1 grade, while in 1955 the No 1 grade amounted to about 75.5% of the total production. Bray stated that the inferior quality was due to adverse weather conditions. He stated that it was too dry in Eastern Kentucky too wet in many parts of the producing area of Central Kentucky, but ideal in Western Kentucky.

The average production was much improved this year. Bray stated with an average yield per acre of 62 crates. By comparison, the Kentucky output per acre in 1955 was 37 crates. The number of harvested acres this year materially increased over last year with 6,880 acres of strawberries being harvested in 1956 while in 1955 the total acreage was approximately 2,755.

Market Uniform Thoroughout State

Remarking upon the uniformity of the market, Bray noted that when No 1's reached their peak price the price per crate was the same throughout the three general selling areas, $8.50 The U. S. No 2's generally sold at a price range per crate of $4.00 to $5.25. In some areas the No 2's went to processors for freezing, canning or preserving. In Easter Kentucky the berries that were sold to the processors were capped in the field and sold for 15 cents per pound.

Bray stated that on the average the price per crate this year was about 10 per cent below last year's This condition, he believes, is not attributable to over supply, but rather, was caused by inferiority of quality.

Blakemore Popluar Variety

The Blakemore variety is still the leading variety among the commercial strawberry producers although it has lost some popularity to newer varieties in recent years. Approximately 60 per cent of the total commercial acreage is planted to Blakemore, 30 per cent to Tennessee Beauty, and 10 per cent to other varieties with the new Pocahontas variety rapidly gaining support.

Kentucky growers of certified seed must label their out-of-state shipments to show analysis and other labeling data, conforming to the laws of the state into which the seed is shipped. The shipper is responsible for meeting the requirements.

White bread prices rose 70 percent between 1946 and 1955—but the farmers received only a 20 percent increase in the same period for their wheat.

American consumers have more than 400 varieties of cheese from which to select.

Horn worms appear in burley

Hornworms have appeared already in some Kentucky burley fields, or will be coming soon, warns Mallory Booth of the U. K. Agricultural Experiment Station entomology department.

Since these pests are capable of defoliating tobacco fields, and are harder to kill when large, farmers are advised to check now for their presence.

When full grown the worms usually are four to five inches long and have a black or red horn at the tail end. One hornworm for every four or five burley plants is considered serious.

Use one of two materials, Bosuh advises. One is TDE (also known as DDD or Rhothane); the other is Endrin.

If TDE is employed, use one pound of actual material per acre of two quarts of the liquid concentrate in five gallons of water (or more) per acre for ground spary equipment. Aerial spray equipment will use about two gallons of water per acre. If a 10 percent TDE dust is used, from 15 to 30 pounds per acre, depending on the plant's size, is correct.

For Endrin, 0.2 to 0.3 pounds of actual material per acre (one to one-and-a-half pints of the liquid concentrate) in five gallons of water is correct. For ground sprayers.

Aerial sprays will use it in two gallons of water per acre or from 15 to 30 pounds per acre of a 1.5 percent Endrin dust is correct. Care should be taken with the toxic material.

If grasshoppers are present, the specialist says, Dieldrin or Aldrin can be used in combination with TDE or Endrin for control. Consult label directions for proportions and safety regulations in using Aldrin or Dieldrin.

LICENSES ON SALE

Miss Beulah H. Hughes, circuit court clerk, has announced that operator's licenses from 4 to 5 have been received from the Department of Revenue and are now on sale in her office. Current drivers licenses will expire July 31, she said.

Chemical rids creeks of odor

A chemical purchased some months ago by the city to be dripped into various city streams has done thus far what manufacturer claimed—destroy sewage odor and killed mosquito larva.

Tanks of the chemical have been in operation at the state garage on Brushy Fork and near the Carlisle Milk Feedlot on Dorsey avenue for the past three weeks according to Mayor William Power.

Mayor Power stated that Mr. Feeback reports the chemical's use has rid the stream near his home of objectionable odors.

Council holds regular meeting

The Carlisle city council met Tuesday night in regular session with four council members present and approved the minutes of the previous meeting without change.

Following recognition of visitors council agreed to rock in part of the street leading to the Kennedy addition if property owners would attend to their share.

A plan for financing curb and gutters was favorably discussed.

A street light was ordered placed in the curve on Eastern avenue near Glenn Greer's and Owen Wade's residences.

Bids were ordered published for a new city truck for the street department.

New uniforms will be purchased by the city for the chief of police and night patrolman.

The old city truck will henceforth be parked on the Armory lot for use of those who wish to deposit their trash.

City Clerk Will J. Greene was instructed to write Mrs. Vivian Scott relative to clean-up around and near her property located on East Main street.

Discussed, but not approved for lack of funds, was assisting the county with painting of the jail.
