CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The spiritual basis for true health and peace will be set forth at Christian Science services this Sunday.
Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Mortals and Immortals" is the Golden Text from Romans 18:6: "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."
Selections to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include the following (265.5): "Mortals must gratitate Godward, their affections and aims grow spiritual,—they must wear the broader interpretations of being, and gain some proper sense of the infinite,—in order that sin and mortality may be put off."
Among the scriptural selections the following will be read: Matthew 11:28: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heaven laden, and I will give you rest."

Our Revival: All who heard Brother Snodgrass agree that he is a great and true preacher of the gospel. No one could hear him without being moved to deeper love and greater loyalty to Christ. He planted the "Good Seed" which Jesus declared is, "The Word Of God." It has and will continue to bear fruit to the glory of God. Mrs. Snodgrass won our hearts by her gracious spirit and thrilled us with her beautiful solos. We give thanks to our Heavenly Father for their ministry among us. There were 21 added to the church.

Dr. William Noel Cain, 65, of 170 North Upper street, was treated Thursday at Good Samaritan hospital, Lexington, for cuts on his nose and forehead. He told attendants he was injured when he fell on a down town street.

Dr. Cain is a native of Carlisle.

'Anybody's Guess'

By Mrs. Perry Vice

Because a number of readers of the Mercury have expressed an interest in this column and little sketches variant from the regular news we pen this tale which is purely imaginary.

To this day I'll never know how it happened but it did. Seemed as if no one knew. It was a quiet, peaceful little settlement of friendly folk who were not yet aware of psychological analysis or explanations for everyone's actions or neither did they ever hear of frustrations which are some times analyzed as the cause human behavior.

They were a contented, happy group, happy in the chatter about their work, families and friends, and the world went by, for newspapers were scarce and of course radio and television were unknown.

The one and only road a little more than a trail wound along the creek to the country store and small village. It was a narrow, rocky road overlapped by tall trees and weeds grew in profusion along the roadside. Horseback was the safest way of travel but a few buggies added distinction to those who could afford them. But even so, they were bereft by ministers who preached with a loud voice the sin of the 16 inch buggies and that young people were far too frivolous.

There are always some of every type of persons in a community—the story teller, the hatest, the biggest liar, the dude type, the religious fanatic, the dreamer, the richest, the poorest, the helpful, the poverty-stricken, the gossiper, and a few who know how to mind their own business.

Outside of this category fall others of course which tends to make a clash of opinions and spicy conversation.

To be named Lizzie or Liz in any language would be a calamity that whipped the individual before she knew what it was all about. Somehow some think a name reflects or is suggestive of certain traits or characteristics. Nothing is of course further from the truth. Yet it is a fact that this Liz was different. Everyone called her poor Liz which was potential suicide to be pitied. It developed in poor Liz a complex that set her apart.

She was a big angular-featured girl who walked with a slump and deadened tread due to her avoirdupois which would tip the scale at 200. Poor Liz! Even her hair was a dull, dingy yellow drawn tightly back from a thick round face with small dull gray eyes. Poor Liz! She was the topic at almost any gathering or where two or three women chattered.

"I feel so sorry for her" was said a thousand times. She doesn't fit in. And then it happened overnight. Liz disappeared as surely as night follows day. Nobody knew what became of the fat girl who just didn't fit in.

If anyone felt guilty because of Poor Liz whose life would have been made a little pleasanter they calmed their conscience and after awhile the whole thing blew over except occasionally some one would wonder what happened to her.

Liz had no parents or near relatives so little or no investigation was made immediately as it was assumed she had gone away to visit some one, she knew.

But after several days passed and she did not return inquiries were made but no trace of her was ever found.

Today could have analyzed poor Liz's trouble even on Foggy Creek. She spent most of her time reading or sewing or housework. Few people could understand why she would pour over a book when sometimes community affairs were in progress. No one would say it was a way to lose herself because of her unpopularity especially with young people. Poor Liz didn't click.

No explanation could or was given by the old couple who had kept Liz, an orphan waif left mysteriously on their door steps 18 years before. They named her Lizzie Jane and that was as far as anyone ever knew. Lizzie grew up and developed in to the personality described in the woman who fell into the brainy class began to wonder after Liz's disappearance. Why after 18 years she would leave as mysteriously as she came? Perhaps there was some hidden meaning to Liz after all. Gifted with some imagination she began to visualize a story based entirely on supposition that it could have been that way.

Suppose Poor Liz's ancestry were wealthy and had some reason to dispose of the child. Suppose the barrier had been removed after 18 years and that Poor Liz stood now the rightful owner to a fortune?

So she soliliquized and the more she mused the more the picture began to take shape. She would do some investigating. But after several trips here and there she ran into a blank wall.

Even so she was not to be discouraged and never doubted her theory so she began calling Poor Liz "Cousin Lizzie." By some inexplicable plan she had decided that it would probably be worth while to claim kin with the fat girl if she ever showed up.

But years went by and Liz didn't show up. Something in a death notice many years later attracted the attention of some one who belonged to the mind-your-own-business type. Could it be? By sheer determination they made it in their way to attend that funeral in a distant town. A few questions and they were fully convinced that they were viewing the remains of Poor Liz.

Searched as the conjecture of the lady with imagination was right. Poor Liz had been whisked away to her rightful position and while the real reason was never know, it was certain she was wealthy, had married and was highly respected regardless of her thwarted childhood.

"What a pity I didn't know," sighed the lady, "I would have called her Cousin Lizzie years ago."
