A sharp distinction

Adlai Stevenson made sharp the distinction between his reasoning on an enduring safe peace, and that of the Eisenhower Administration in a recent television broadcast to the nation on the H-bomb.

The distinction is between Stevenson's unwillingness to accept defeat in the search for a way to tame the H-bomb, and the Administration's unwillingness to consider or discuss new ideas in this all-important field.

The key to Mr. Stevenson's attitude is contained in this paragraph:

"This is one matter on which the defeatist view that nothing can be done must be rejected. I say that something can be done, that the deadlock can be broken, that the world can make a new beginning toward peace."

Toward this end, Mr. Stevenson proposes to make it "the first order of business," if elected President, to seek an agr the other atomic powers on ba H-bomb tests. "by conference sultation—at whatever level— place—the circumstances mi would be most fruitful."

Clearly, Mr. Stevenson intend make this "the first order of b he also intends to give it his pe tion as Chief Executive.

In contrast to Mr. Stevenson to confer "at whatever level, place" necessary, is President flat assertion that he has said h on this subject which affects th of mankind. As Mr. Stevenson one subject on which there co must not be, any last word."

Athletic playground nears completion; turkeys bringing 15 cents per pound

Thursday, October 22, 1936

Blount Bros. of Moorefield won a number of premiums on their hounds at the annual meeting of the Central Kentucky Foxhunters Association at Oil Springs which closed Saturday.

The athletic field and playground on the East Union road, just outside the city limits of Carlisle, will be finished this week if the weather permits.

With their defeat over Stanford last Thursday, the Carlisle high school Musketeers and Shelbyville went into a tie for first place in the Central Kentucky Football Conference.

Rains last Thursday and Friday further relieved the water shortage in the Carlisle water works lake, and with continued restricted use there will be a sufficient quantity to last for 30 days or two weeks longer.

Plans are being completed for the annual agricultural fair which will be held here on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 6 and 7.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 25

Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man. (Matthew 15:11.)

Endowed with resources for happiness—social position, good health, and wealth—a husband and wife seemingly had everything to make life enjoyable and worth while. Yet the wife was oversensitive and jealous. Her attitude toward her husband provoked rude retorts on his part. They separated.

How much different life would have been if Christ had ruled in that husband and wife! For our evil temper and for our wrath we find effective remedy only in the gospel. The power of Christ can redeem us. Then we learn that His teachings never fail. With spiritual rebirth Christ enables us to better our characters, overlook injuries and offenses, practice humility in our behavior, possess a hatred of sin.

Every person who accepts Christ as his personal Saviour makes a distinct contribution to a better world.

PRAYER

Praised be Thou, O God, for the gift of a new direction to my life through meditation upon Thy Word. Grant to me peace of mind and gentleness of spirit that I may do no injury in thought or deed to my fellow man, in the name of Jesus, who teaches and guides me in my life day by day. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

As a Christian, I am making a contribution to world order.—Taveres Franca (Brazil)

Letters to the Editor

Editor, Carlisle Mercury

Dear Mr. Fisher:

I would like to call to the attention of your paper an article concerning Carlisle which appeared in Newsweek Magazine last month.

In the September 17 issue of Newsweek, was a one and-a-half page article concerning integration and how easily Carlisle, a small Southern town, had accepted it. I think it is an honor to have a writeup in such a large magazine, and that it is something all Nicholas Countians should know and can be proud of! I'm certainly glad it was called to my attention.

Yours truly,

Alma Dean Hudnall

Miranda Homemakers

By Mrs. Edgar Scott

Miranda Homemakers met September 12 for their all day meeting at the home of Mrs. George D. Scott Sr. Nine members enjoyed the day. Business was cared for by Mrs. John Clay, president and devotional was given by Mrs. Darrell.

Mrs. Cecil Smart gave a very helpfull lesson on "Style Trends for Fall." She told what is best to buy for fall in dresses, suits, hats and accessories and showed materials most suitable for the busy working women of today.

On October 10 trends changed from "Trends in Clothing," to "Trends in Home Furnishings" when the club met with Mrs. Otho and Mrs. Edgar Scott for an all day meeting. 18 members and one visitor were present. Devotional was given by Mrs. Willie Stone.

Calendars for the 1956-57 year were filled out and goals for the new year were given by the reading, membership, citizenship and publicity chairmen.

The Lesson "Trends in Home Furnishings" was given by Mrs. George D. Scott Sr. She brought about the fact of how much busier the women of today are than they were years ago because of attractive salaries paid by industrial and commercial plants and many of them help to support the family with financial aid. Therefore, they are looking for furniture easier cared for.

Two terms that apply to the newer furniture are "modern" and "modernistic." The modern furniture is easily cared for and is durable and combines well with old furnishings, while the modernistic is insulting to design and just a passing fad.

Designers now urge furniture sold by the piece with the trend away from suites of furniture. Coffee tables are longer, many being used for seating space when necessary.

The trend in upholstery is toward mohair blends, cotton tweeds and patterned cottons while colors tend to be stronger.

Wool fiber still sets the pattern for the judging of rugs because of its warmith, softness and resistance to soil and color fastness. Window treatment is getting simpler with the clean airy look of free hanging fabrics instead of fussy frills. Curtain fabrics that require less care are being used of dacron, nylon, fiberglass and rayon with cotton being the most popular fabric.

Our November meeting will be with Mrs. W. W. Rigg, when we study dried arrangements of the "Winter Bouquets."

Barterville Teen-Age 4-H Club

Rebecca Gaunce, Reporter

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Milam.

Dottie Hollar made a motion that our 4-H club be called Barterville Teen-Age club. Bobby Taylor seconded the motion and it was carried.

A motion made by Larry Falconer was that we have a meeting twice a month. Elcon Gaunce seconded the motion. They were disputed by the majority voting on having our meeting once a month. Bobby Green made a motion that we meet each Monday night. Bobby Taylor seconded the motion and it was carried.

The officers will meet at Marion Anderson's to decide on the programs throughout the year. Only the officers meet.

Philys Tapp led us in the 4-H pledge.

Larry Falconer led us in the American Pledge.

Brenda Hollar led us in our games and everyone enjoyed them.

There were thirty present and a few parents. We welcome any parents to take part.
