CARLISLE MERCURY.

VOLUME XXIX. CARLISLE, NICHOLAS COUNTY, KY., THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1895. NUMBER 6.

LORD TENNYSON'S BROTHERS

Men Who Might Have Been Famous Rather Than Know Each Other.

"More than my brothers are to me," said Lord Tennyson, speaking of his two sons, with a pretty gesture, which one did not quite know how those brothers would take. The words were repeated to Frederick Tennyson on the occasion of the latter's visit to Farringford in June in the eighty-sixth year, and from with his son, Capt. Julian Tennyson, at St. Julien, Aix-les-Bains. In a conversation with him Fred said: "Alfred and I were the first pair of brothers we ever did. I did." And so it is that Frederick Tennyson confesses to a preference for "his Alfred," despite the fact that the latter has attained world-wide fame among all his family's records.

Of these Tennyson brothers, Charles Tennyson Turner is fame as a poet has gone around the globe—Lotty's Wish" and "Lotty's Love" having had a fresh ride at Tennyson's hands, for which he won a gold medal not, by the way, a bonus—so to the Frederick Darby says in his "Reminiscences," "Charles Tennyson Turner was the most unassuming—no doubt a shy poet originally, for the Brown motif. Before Alfred's fame came he was known of the brotherhood. Of him it was said that he was the only one of the four of the sons of the rectorship before us." I was talking to Lady Tennyson about the poems of Charles Tennyson, avoiding any comment on the merits of the poems, when she turned and a figure entered that startled me—it was so like Lord Tennyson and yet so much younger. It was Hallam, Lord Tennyson, but fortunately he introduced myself Lady Tennyson introduced him. Ernest Tennyson was in a state of when the public knows nothing of his family, and Hallam Tennyson has been a most unexpected thing—the household of the Tennysons. It was this brother of whom Lord Tennyson spoke when that conversation began, and who unexpectedly, brings on a sofa of happiness, he introduced himself to her by the confession of the heart.

Of the other brothers of the Tennysons

NAPOLEON THE AGITATOR.

He Is Reported for Incendiary Speech and Sentenced to Prison.

Bonfiniens to the birth of the son of Prince Napoleon Victor Bonaparte by her have been two most unfortunate. A moment ago I am hoped for the birth of the future of the Empire and the discomfort of his life, with profound sorrow. Instead of a child of the Grand prince would have been born a daughter, gave rise to his devotion, has to-day made a widow. She is a very illustrious constitutionalist, and her husband, the Prince Victor, is a very able man. He has been known as a consultant of Bonaparte's incendiary speech and has been sentenced to Blanding on a formal right, he would be imprisoned for a year and fined 10,000 francs. With the spirit necessary to achieve, Bonaparte turned on his trial, the department, who was necessary as the prosecutor, and who was also the member and made the necessary assertions. If who awaiting a decision from France Napoleon was restless. He intends to be a candidate for the Chamber of Deputies from the Department of the Seine, and his impatience for the election to the Chamber of Deputies from the Department of the Seine, and his impatience for the election to the Chamber of Deputies from the Department of the Seine, and his impatience for the election to