CHRISTIAN SCIENCE
Man's perfect, spiritual relationship to God will be emphasized at Christian Science services this Sunday.
Opening selections from the Bible in the Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Adam and Fallen Man" will include these passages from the first chapter of Genesis: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: . . . So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them . . . And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good."
From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy these lines will be read (p. 259): "The Christlike understanding of scientific being and divine healing includes a perfect Principle and idea,—perfect God and perfect man,—as the basis of thought and demonstration."
The Golden Text comes from Psalm 138: "The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me: thy mercy, O Lord, endureth for ever."

Expanded state

pointed out, benefit from the statewide services of the State Health Department, the Commission for Handicapped Children, the Child Welfare Department, and the vital departments of Agriculture, Conservation, Parks, Highways, Economic Development and Aeronautics. People in all these benefit also from the services of the tourist and travel promotion program, the Military Department, the Department of Public Safety, State Police, Mines and Minerals, the Attorney General's Department, and the State's reformatories for men and women and the State prison.

Of direct value and benefit to the people of any given town or county are the services of all other departments and agencies. the Governor pointed out, calling attention to the protection afforded the public by the regulatory boards and agencies which examine the qualification for license of those who want to practice medicine, dentistry or law, or offer themselves to the public as engineers, architects, insurance men, securities salesmen etc.

"Many services are rarely considered," Combs said, "when a person thinks about State Government. But these services combined are the State Government that the people have established for the purpose of doing through government what individual citizens cannot do for themselves."

Deaths

Jesse J. Earlywine

Jesse J. Earlywine, 54, a native of Nicholas County, died last Wednesday at St. Elizabeth hospital in Covington, after a brief illness. He had lived in Covington a number of years.

Grain program under way

Sign-up for the 1961 Feed Grain Program recently passed by Congress is now under way in Nicholas County, H. S. Vice, Chairman of the County ASC Office announced this week.

The first farmers to cooperate in the program are: Gilbert Hammonds, Fred Tolson, Ruth C. Hollar, H. S. Vice, Paul and Luther Tincher, J. W. Miller and Harvey Wagoner.

High interest in the program is reported from throughout the State, H. S. Vice states. All producers of corn and grain sorghum are eligible to take part. To cooperate a farmer agrees to divert at least 20 percent of his feed grain base to a soil conserving use.

In return, he receives a payment for each acre diverted and is eligible for price support on his normal production of corn and grain sorghum. He also qualifies for price support on his oats, barley, and rye that he produces.

A Feed Grain acreage report must be filed at the ASC Office by May 12 in order to be eligible to participate. May 22 is the final date for accepting applications for participation.

New school zone signs

Through the courtesy of Rector Smoot and the Nicholas County Highway Department, three new School Zone signs have been erected for Nicholas County high school. The three signs are located on Highways 32, 36, and West Main street.

Much emphasis has been placed on highway safety during the school year at Nicholas County high school. The observance of the new school zone signs will be another safety precaution put into effect.

CARLISLE NATIVE WINS HONOR IN NEW YORK

Dr. William R. Willoughby, a native of Carlisle and graduate of the University of Kentucky, has been elected president of the New York State Political Science Association.

Willoughby is a professor of history and government at the St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y. Next month the University of Wisconsin will publish his book, "The St. Lawrence Seaway: A Study in Politics and Diplomacy."

METHODIST GROUP NAMES CLARK PASTOR

The Rev. J. I. Meyer, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Winchester, was named executive secretary of the Kentucky Methodist Conference Board of Education April 28.

He will succeed Dr. D. V. Snapp, who will retire June 1, after 42 years at the post. The office will be moved to Lexington then. Dr. Snapp is a native of Nicholas County.

FIRE DESTROYS CAR

A car driven by William F. Shields, Carlisle Route 2, was destroyed by fire at 10:30 a.m. Friday. The fire started in the trunk of the car as it was traveling toward Paris on the Millersburg road.

The fire was believed to be caused by a backfire, firemen said. Shields and a passenger, Miss Joyce Christopher, were not injured.

NCHS receives higher rating

The Nicholas County Board of Education has been notified of the official classification of its schools for the school year of 1960-61. The rating of Nicholas County high school was changed from a provisional to a standard rating which is the highest rating that could be given to a school with like enrollment.

Accrediting standards have been changed since the beginning of 1959 school year and schools are now classified according to the program that is offered by the school rather than by the number of pupils enrolled. Emphasis has been changed to a large extent, from classifying a school solely on numbers to basing the classification on the quality of its program and its ability to offer a well rounded training program.

Formerly, classifications were made, largely on the basis of an annual report of the enrollment, the offering of the school and the facilities. The present methods used in determining the classification, not only involves a more detailed report, but also includes a visitation of the school by an evaluation committee composed of trained educators from the Department of Education that spent at least one day in the school. During the visit by the committee, classes are visited, equipment and facilities are inspected, teachers and school officials are interviewed and pupils are interviewed to determine if the school appears to meet the need of the pupils involved.

The highest classification for Kentucky high schools is the comprehensive classification which is received by a few of the larger schools in Kentucky. One of the requirements, which kept the Nicholas County high school, an enrollment of 600 pupils and a senior class of at least 100 pupils. The number of course offerings for the classification is 43. The Nicholas County high school offers 36 which is 3 more than is required for the standard rating it received.

The Nicholas County Elementary school received a provisional rating which is comparable to a provisional rating for high schools. One of the main factors that prevents a high rating is a central library. The Moorefield school is not rated because it has less than eight teachers.

Credit for the excellent classifications is due to the efforts of the Nicholas County Board of Education and the entire school staff that has put forth all effort to provide excellent schools.

Attend African conference

After having made a study of Africa, the following pupils, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson, attended a conference held in Louisville recently: Linda McDowell, Jeanne Sharp, Jessica McCree, Danny Smith, Eddie Taylor and Ralph Wesley.

"Kentucky Looks at Africa" was the topic studied by the different groups before meeting with many outstanding and nationally known leaders in discussion of the African situation. This study was sponsored by the University of Louisville.

The students attended different sections at the Conference and in this way were able to bring much information back to their class the following week.

This study was made by the "World History" class at Nicholas County high school.

Moss-Smith Vows To Be Said May 28

Mrs. Harry Moss of Cynthiana, announces the engagement of her daughter, Bonita Moss, to Warren Smith, son of Mr. and

They called him Willie Greene

If you ever get in a tight squeeze, and need a printer, there is one in town, and he is not too busy right now.

In 1900 he worked for Dr. N. H. McNew on the Carlisle Democrat, salary $1.75 per week, six days a week and till midnight on Wednesdays. In the summer, the sun seemed to rise too early and set mighty late, as nobody had heard of a 40-hour work week nor over-time pay.

He learned to set all kinds of type by hand, lock it in the form, carry it to a back room, slip it into a job-press and turn on the foot-power, but he never was able to lock up a form the size of a newspaper page, and carry it down to the basement where the big press had a D.C. motor.

Distributing all that type, after it was used, and getting each letter back into its own little pit would get monotonous and some times not all the caps got into the upper case. Oh boy, when he peed it on the floor, thats when he learned to cuss so fluently!

Finally, he was trusted to pull proofs, read them and make the corrections, and thats when he would give some of the local items what he thought were comic touches, but were not funny to Dr. McNew when he read them next day, after the victim complained.

Probably the only reason he was kept on the job until he had to go back to school, was his habit of not insisting on prompt payment of the generous salary.

Two suberbsers' homes adjoined, an elderly maiden lady and a widow, who were not too friendly at best. One night, when applying addresses with a lead pencil, he thought it would be fun to transpose the Miss and the Mrs., but next day both parties happened to call for their mail at the same time and refused to accept the papers in no uncertain terms. They brow-beat the Postmaster, who rode the Doctor, and Doc piled it all up on his Printer Devil.

The Mercury never mentioned the other paper but the boy finally got bold enough to pass its office, where the K.U. is located now, to reach Doc's office in the Rainie Smith home and on to the Democrat plant, in a residence about where Clyde Sexton has his store. His fingers are still burning from the editorials he set up in type.

At that time the power plant was not operated in daylight hours nor after midnight. On Wednesday night if the papers were not printed by 12 o'clock, he ran to the light plant and asked Jack Spratt to keep it going, then back again when finished. By coal-oil lamps the papers were folded, addressed with lead pencil and the mail bags carried up town and left in a shed behind the Post Office, and then home.

Loose rock covered the streets, alleys deep in mud, not even a coal-oil lamp in a window, flashlights in the future and the far end of School avenue seemed miles away.

They called him Willie Greene and some still do.
