What Alfalfa Variety Shall We Sow?

Our Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station is still recommending seven alfalfa varieties for use in Kentucky. These are Atlantic Buffalo, DuPuits, Narragansett, Ranger, Vernal and Williamson. In a general way, these varieties have been about equal in yield but there are some differences in the varieties that might influence the choice. For example, we find that DuPuits will usually produce more hay during the first 2 or 3 years than the other varieties but goes down rapidly because of loss of stand after about 3 years. This means that over a 4 or 5 year period the other varieties catch up in yield. There is really no reason alfalfa should not last 6 or 7 years in Kentucky. If you want to include alfalfa in a 3 or 4 year rotation perhaps DuPuits would be best suited. For longer rotations one of the other varieties would probably do better.

Also the Vernal and Narragansett varieties have done better in southern fields. So if you plan to grow your alfalfa either Narragansett or Vernal should be used.

If on the other hand, grazing is the use for the alfalfa and it really makes little difference which of the recommended varieties you use. There is a pretty good price spread among varieties this year so it will pay to shop around and choose certified seed of the recommended varieties that is cheapest.

Again the currently recommended varieties are Atlantic, Buffalo, DuPuits, Narragansett, Ranger, Vernal and Williamson.

Seeding Grasses and Legumes in Spring

Kentucky farmers should be seeding cool season grasses such as Kentucky bluegrass, tall fescue and orchard grass should be seeded in late early February and late March. Ladino clover and grass and tall fescue may be seeded as early as early April but bluegrass should not be sown after April 1st. Fall seeding of these grasses especially tall fescue and bluegrass is likely to be more successful in Kentucky than spring seeding. Now is the time that most legumes are sown. Both red and white clover may be sown from mid February through mid April. Lespedeza and alfalfa may be sown from March 15 through April 10. In addition, however alfalfa may be very successfully sown in mid or late summer. Attention to lime and fertilizer is more important in seeding time. Another thing is that grass and legume seed are very small, much smaller than most seed, what type of seed is required and how much seed to sow per acre are of prime importance in making a successful seeding.

Fertilizing Pasture For Profit

Pasture is a crop just like a wheat or corn field. It is a crop. To be productive pasture must have enough plant food available to feed the plants. Too many pastures are not being fertilized after the stand is established and as a result yields go down and the stand is thinned out. In Kentucky tobacco is heavily fertilized and corn is being fertilized at a fairly good rate, yielding moderate rate, but hay and pastures fertilization is being neglected.

Pasture fertilization falls into three separate phases: Lime and fertilizer put on at seeding time. Maintenance fertilizer that is an annual top dressing with the needed plant food. Fertilization for re-establishing legumes in good grass sods.

Most of the lime and fertilizer applied on hay and pasture is being supplied at seeding time or for reestablishing legumes in grass sods.

Maintenance fertilization is being neglected and many pastures starve to death after they are established. Establishing good grass legume sod costs a lot of money and involves certain risks. Once established, proper fertilization with annual top-dressing of the required plant food will be profitable.

Green or Foliage Plants in the Home

Many types of flowers are grown in the home for their foliage effect rather than for their flowers. Most of these plants are subtropical or tropical in origin. They are usually native to the forest, hence they grow in shady or semi-shady locations under fairly humid conditions.

Green foliage plants usually need only small amounts of fertilizer. Over-fertilization will produce faster growth. This may result in the out-growing of space available sooner than desired. It will also produce darker-colored foliage.

Plants need varying quantities of water. They will stay smaller longer than if they are well watered.

The loss of lower leaves or browning of edge and tips of leaves is usually due to a water imbalance. Plants lose water faster than they receive it. Rubber trees, philodendrons and their relatives are most often affected. After you start your furnace in the fall the humidity is lowered and the roots cannot supply water fast enough to replace that which is lost.

These same symptoms may be caused by: 1) over-fertilization, (2) excessive watering, which saturates the soil to the point of depriving the roots of oxygen. The lack of oxygen leaves the capacity of the roots to pick up water and cause part of the root system to die.

Many Farmers

like to sow their Red Clover during the flark of the moon of February or March. This year, according to our version, this period extends from Feb. 27th to March 6th.

The next period is from March 20th to April 4th. Some prefer to wait until the 100th day of the year, which falls on April 10th, while others sow when the ground and weather is right, regardless of the moon or the date.

At whatever time you prefer to sow, the important thing is to sow good, clean, adapted seed, and we have it in Red Clover or any other kind of seed you will need this spring.

Let us book your order and have your seed ready when YOU want it.

Jury gives Martin 3 years in robbery

Tuesday the Nicholas Circuit Court jury found a Lexington man guilty of a robbery charge and set his punishment at three years in prison.

Albert Thomas Martin, 24, was convicted of robbing 71 year old G. C. Townsend, retired Carlisle merchant, of his billfold containing $21 in cash, a check for $50 and a note for $75.

Martin was arrested and charged with the crime after Stanley Ishmael of Mt. Sterling, a service station operator, identified him as the man who bought two tires at the station and paid for them with the $60 check and received the balance of the amount in change.

Townsend, whose right arm is off at the elbow, said that he was struck on the back of his head. "It hurts near been ear 61, and knocked ting position. He soon got loose up and a man with part of his face covered with cloth, pointing a cloth-covered hand towards him and demanding, 'Give me your wallet'.

Townsend said he complied and his assailant ran out of the barn.

Townsend said he was dazed and unable to identify the man or to get another look at him after he fled.

But Townsend had the bank stop payment on the check which was for rent of some Lexington property leased to his niece, and when the check was returned to the service station by the bank Ishmael started the inquiry that led to Martin's arrest.

Townsend said he did not know what he was hit with, but that he suffered a cut on the back of his head.

Judge John P. Lair of Cynthiana ordered Martin returned to jail pending formal sentencing.

DOCTORS VISIT

Dr. Robert Sparks and Dr. Leon Riggs of Louisville, who will open dental offices here in June, were in Carlisle Saturday.

John H Glenn Jr., was orbited into space Tuesday in near perfect flight that took him around the earth three times in 4 hours and 56 minutes.

The 40 year old Marine lieutenant colonel is the first American to orbit the earth.

To correct technical problems forced the delay 2 hours and 27 minutes. The flight had already been delayed 10 times due to weather and various reasons.

The launch did come at 9:47 a.m. and Glenn and his sister Friendship 7 orbited around into a near perfect flight path. Top speed was 17,545 miles an hour.

Glenn did encounter trouble in the first orbit with the attitude control system and had to shift to a backup method of controlling the capsule's relative position in space. However the trouble dramatically diminished the value of having a human aboard a spacecraft that was able to control his spaceship to bring his own judgment.

The trip ended at 2:43 p.m. when he and his capsule parachuted into the main recovery area. He was picked up by crane the deck of the destroyer Noa 21 minutes after striking the water.

Project Mercury officials expressed satisfaction in Glenn's performance.

Both cars were considerably damaged.
