Mr. and Mrs. Wells to have 63rd wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Wells, 266 Lillestun Avenue, Paris, will celebrate their 63rd wedding anniversary Saturday, Jan. 23, 1982.

The couple was married Jan. 23, 1919 by the Rev. Gold Smith of the First Baptist Church, Paris.

They have one son, James A. Wells, Carlisle; one grandson, James Giffin Wells, Paris, and one great granddaughter, Tine Wells of Paris.

Homemakers meet

Carlisle West

The Carlisle West Homemakers met Friday, Jan. 8 at 1:30 p.m. in the Nicholas County Public Library with 12 members and Mrs. Margie H. Wilson, Home Demonstration Agent, present.

Mrs. Russell Shrout read from the Homemakers Inspirational Program for January, "Take Joy" and Psalm 139:8-12.

Roll call was answered with "my children." The minutes and the treasurer's report was given by Miss Evelyn George. Excerpts from the Family Life Newsletter and the Green Thumb were read. Reading and sewing reports were given and cards to the ill members were signed.

The lesson on creative cooking with herbs and spices was presented by Mrs. Grimes Caywood. Mrs. Wilson passed around the lists of lessons to be chosen for 1982-84 and from the different categories, 14 were marked.

The needlecraft lesson which began the first Tuesday night in January to continue through March were mentioned.

The Kentucky State Homemakers meeting to be held March 17-19 on the University of Kentucky campus was discussed.

Moorefield

The Moorefield Homemakers Club met in the home of Mrs. Hanson Ellington on Jan. 7.

The president, Mrs. J.S. Wilson, called the meeting to order and conducted the business session as follows: The devotional was given by Mrs. Joe Smart. The roll was called by Mrs. Williams and 11 members answered with "something you would like to do this year." The minutes were read and approved and the financial report was given.

The president conveyed a thanks to the club for the donation given at Christmas to Mrs. Curtis.

Mrs. Joe Smart, Home Management Chairman, gave a report on returning and exchanging gifts. No other chairman reports were given.

The Blue Grass Homemakers lesson ballot was voted upon for two years.

Mrs. Margie Wilson announced the state meeting for March 17-19 at the Fine Arts Building.

There was no further business and the lesson on herb gardening in Kentucky was given by Mrs. W.J. Clark, a very interesting lesson on cooking using herbs.

During a social hour our hostess served delicious foods from the lesson, assisted by Mrs. Clark.

Our February meeting will be with Mrs. Joe Smart on Feb. 4.

Headquarters

The Headquarters Homemakers met Jan. 5 at 10:30 with Mrs. Reynolds Allison as hostess.

Mrs. Allison presided due to the absence of the president, Mrs. Taylor Snelling. Mrs. Emmett Darrell gave the devotional, "What's new about you?"

Seventeen members and two visitors, Mrs. John Cleaver Sr. and Mrs. Robert Coatney, answered the roll call with "the nicest thing about having children."

Mrs. E.V. Delaney gave the Family Life lesson and Mrs. Armintie Clukenbeard gave a report on home management.

After the "show and tell" and "did you know that?" Mrs. James Snapp gave the lesson on spices and herbs, displaying a sample of 33 different herbs that the members tried to identify. She reported the U.S. imports 290 million pounds of herbs a year. Herbs can be used instead of salt. She prepared dill bread and curried fruit for our sack lunch.

The Homemakers State Meeting will be March 17-19 in Lexington at the Fine Arts Building.

Topics for the programs for the next two years were discussed and voted upon.

After the recreational period led by Mrs. Allison, the meeting adjourned.

Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it.

'Bernstein/Beethoven' coming to KET

"Bernstein/Beethoven," an 11-part weekly series featuring Leonard Bernstein conducting performances of Ludwig van Beethoven's nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis" and several of the composer's other works, premieres on KET Monday, Jan. 25 at 10 p.m.

The series, presented in simulcast over several Kentucky radio stations, opens with performances of Beethoven's "Egmont Overture" (Opus 84) and the "Symphony No. 1 in C Major" (Opus 21).

Throughout the series of one-hour programs, Bernstein leads the Vienna Philharmonic and Amsterdam's Concertgebaw Orchestra. In addition to the music, the conductor offers his personal reminiscences about the compositions and comments on Beethoven and his times. He is joined by actor Maximilian Schell who co-hosts the introductions to the programs.

In Kentucky, "Bernstein/Beethoven" will be simulcast by these National Public Radio affiliates: WKYU-FM (88.9) Bowling Green; WKDL-FM (90.5) Louisville; WMKY-FM (90.3) Morehead; WKMS-FM (91.3) Murray; and WKXU-FM (88.9) Richmond.

Son of former resident on faculty at Vanderbilt

Dr. John W. Collins, son of a former Carlisle resident, has been named to the faculty of Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville. He is the son of Oren L. Collins, who was reared in Carlisle and attended Carlisle High School prior to becoming a registered pharmacist.

Dr. Collins received a Bachelor of Arts degree and Doctor of Medicine degree from the University of Kentucky. Following internship at the University of South Carolina, Dr. Collins was in general practice in Cadiz, Ky.

After completion of a three-year residency in eye surgery at the University of Kentucky Medical Center, Dr. Collins performed a fellowship in ophthalmic plastic and reconstructive surgery at Vanderbilt University Medical Center under the direction of Dr. Ralph E. Wesley, formerly of Carlisle.

Dr. Collins' father, Mr. Oren L. Collins, is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. E.M. and Louise Collins of Carlisle. After leaving Carlisle, he became a registered pharmacist and owned Collins Drugs Store in Richmond from 1944 to 1978. Mr. Collins presently works with Economy Drugs on Eastern Bypass in Richmond, Ky.

Dr. John Collins has been named Instructor in Ophthalmology and holds appointments at VA Medical Center, Nashville, Meharry Medical College and the Nashville General Hospital.

Ophthalmic plastic surgery deals with disorders of the eyelids, tear ducts, facial bones, orbit and artificial eye problems.

Kay's Kitchen

By Kay Fisher

Boneless, skinless breast of chicken is virtually free of fat and low in cholesterol, thus making it a delight to dieters and the cook as well.

CHICKEN CACCIATORE

¾ cup sliced fresh mushrooms
½ of 8-ounce can, about ½ cup, tomatoes, cut up
½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped onion
3 tablespoons dry white wine
1 clove minced garlic
½ teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
2 whole chicken breasts, boned, skinned, and split in half lengthwise
Paprika
2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons cold water
Fresh mushroom crowns

In medium skillet, combine sliced mushrooms, tomatoes, green pepper, onion, wine, garlic, oregano, salt and pepper. Place chicken breasts on top. Sprinkle lightly with additional salt. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 25 minutes or till chicken is tender. Remove chicken to warm platter; sprinkle with paprika. Combine cornstarch and water; stir into skillet mixture. Cook and stir till thickened and bubbly. Cook one minute longer. Spoon sauce over chicken breasts. Garnish with mushroom crowns. Four servings, 139 calories each.

CHICKEN LASAGNA

1½ cups fat-skimmed chicken broth (or 1 10-ounce can, undiluted)
1 6-ounce can tomato paste
¾ cup water
1 medium onion, chopped
1 large garlic clove, minced
1 tablespoon dried oregano
Salt and pepper to taste
6 lasagna noodles, uncooked
2 cups cooked diced chicken
1 8-ounce container cottage cheese, low fat
4 thin slices Mozzarella cheese
4 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons Italian-seasoned bread crumbs

Stir together the chicken broth, tomato paste, water, onion, garlic, herbs and seasonings until smooth. Spray a nine-inch square cake pan with non-stick spray. Arrange part of the noodles to make a single layer. Break them up to fit if necessary. Top with part of the chicken, part of the sauce, and part of the cheeses. Continue making layers. Finish with a layer of sauce, then top with breadcrumbs.

Cover pan with a double layer of foil and place pan on a cookie sheet or in a roasting pan. Put in a cold oven and set temperature for 300 degrees. Bake three hours. Makes six servings, about 300 calories each.

CHICKEN IMPERIAL

1 pound chicken breasts, halved and boned, fat removed
2 tablespoons margarine
1½ teaspoons seasoned salt
1 teaspoon curry powder
1 teaspoon dried oregano, optional (I leave this out)
½ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ cup dry sherry
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
Dash Tabasco sauce
1 cup well-drained, canned peach slices

Place prepared chicken in baking pan. Set aside. Melt margarine in saucepan; stir in salt, curry powder, mustard, garlic powder, paprika, and oregano if used, and mix well. Add sherry. Bring to boil. Spoon half over chicken. Bake, uncovered, in 350-degree oven for one hour. About 10 minutes before chicken is done, place peach slices on chicken pieces. Spoon remaining sauce over all. Serve hot. Four servings, approximately 261 calories.

Protection secretary tells ways to prevent frozen water pipes

Frozen water pipes have been more common than the winter cold since the county was besieged by an arctic cold wave last weekend. Cynthiana's Tracy Farmer, the newly appointed Secretary of Public Protection and Regulation, suggested several ways to prevent the hazard last week.

Farmer said that persons should double-check home insulation and make sure that drafty areas which might let cold air in the pipes are blocked. Another tip would be to let a stream of water run from a faucet, keeping both air and water moving through the pipes and lessening the chance of a freeze.

If these preventative steps do not work, however, Farmer urges extra care if you're going to try and thaw the pipes.

"Thawing water pipes can be more than uncomfortable work," Farmer said, "It can also be dangerous."

Division of plumbing officials in the cabinet's Department of Housing Building and Construction offered several ways to thaw pipes.

"If you use a flammable torch, make sure you open the faucet on the line you are working on," says assistant division director Carl Vancleave. "Also, you should start with the torch near the faucet and work away from it."

This procedure is necessary because the water becomes steam when it meets with the intense heat. If the heat is applied at some point away from the faucet, the steam will build up and the pipe will rupture.

With flammable torches there is also the obvious danger of starting a fire.

Farmer continued. "If you're not sure of how to handle a torch, we advise the use of a safer method."

One safer method to thaw pipes is the use of heat tape. Heat tape distributes the warmth more evenly, so the problem of steam buildup is lessened. But, even heat tape has its drawbacks.

It's the slowest method, according to Vancleave. More importantly, the tape is an electrical conductor which raises the risk of electrocution.

"No matter which method you use to prevent or to thaw frozen pipes, safety should be uppermost in your mind," adds Farmer. "If you have any doubts, call a plumber and check on the most effective methods for getting the water back on tap."

That is, if you can get hold of one these days.

Kentucky Business Scene

(c) 1982, Kentucky Business Ledger, Inc.

When Bloomingdale's retail chain opened its "Oh, Kentucky!" boutiques in major American cities, and other prestige-name department stores also got into the business of promoting Kentucky crafts, craftspeople naturally began to wonder: How long will a good thing last?

"Craftspeople are really pleased with the promotion because it means more bucks in their pockets as they provide people with collectibles of lasting value," said Jim Seidelman, executive director of the Berea-based Kentucky Guild of Artists and Craftsmen.

But Mr. Seidelman and others in the business of marketing high quality quilts, furniture, pottery and the like don't know how long they can expect strong sales after the major retail chains turn to other merchandising attractions.

Karen Horseman, crafts coordinator for state government's Department of the Arts, said Frankfort is concerned as well about keeping the industry profitable in years to come. She said the department will publish a 500-name crafts directory, co-sponsor a buyers' show in Lexington in March and coordinate seminars to assist artists in designing and marketing their wares.

Ms. Horseman is encouraged by the increasing numbers of smaller, lesser-known shops ordering Kentucky crafts and by the fact that state parks gift shops will offer larger-than-usual supplies of Kentucky crafts next summer.

Crafts promoters give much of the credit for the success of the statewide crafts push to Phyllis George Brown, wife of Gov. John Y. Brown. As Mr. Seidelman put it, "The nation wasn't aware of Kentucky's wealth of talent before Phyllis got involved."

"The PR has been good for the state," noted Garry Barker, warehouse manager for the Marketing Appalachia Traditional Community Handcrafts (MATCH) co-op in Berea. "The effort has helped a few craftspeople, who previously had limited production, start marketing a lot of stuff; some are working day and night."

David (Ky.) Appalachian Crafts Center is among the businesses benefiting from the interest in Kentucky crafts exhibited by such trend-setting stores as Marshall Field's, Bullocks and Neiman Marcus, in addition to Bloomingdale's. "We had fairly large orders from Bloomingdale's for Christmas stockings and ornaments made from antique quilt tops, and for quilt racks and hickory coffee tables," said Mary Lou Manzardo, the sales manager.

Pennyroyal Industries, a Princeton-based sheltered workshop for the handicapped, is another Bloomingdale's supplier. Bill Henry Cartwright, the executive director, is hoping to fill a reorder soon for crafts-quality wooden tray tables.

However, some crafts spokespersons wonder whether the industry can readily supply the rising demand for Kentucky crafts.

"The more intricate the skill, the longer it takes to learn," Mr. Barker said. "You can't really go out and hire somebody and have them come in with a particular skill level. Learning a craft may take several months to several years."

Mr. Seidelman said "purists" in the crafts community resist customer pressures to change colors or patterns. "Some craftspeople are wary of assembly lines, though there are ways to incorporate quality control in an assembly line setting," he said.

There's also no way to tell how much the craft sales are meaning in terms of revenue to either the artisans or the state. Because craftspeople generally handle their own transactions, industry and government spokespersons couldn't accurately estimate those figures.

But while all the reviews about the state's promotional efforts aren't yet in, program supporters like Ms. Horseman are optimistic about the long-range impact. "Things are really beginning to snowball," she said. "Crafts are in now, and people are buying them because they last."

lawyers, statisticians and computers, can work directly with regulatory agencies or even go to court to challenge unfair or inequitable regulations. The small-business person can not afford to do so. Under legislative veto, any person who thinks a regulation will cause undue hardship —or is not strong enough — can take his case to his senators or representative.

Legislative veto was one of the top priorities of the 1980 White House Conference on Small Business. President Reagan campaigned in favor of the idea. And when the NFIB polled its half million members, they responded overwhelmingly in support of the legislative veto. Now, members of Congress will decide whether or not they will accept responsibility for the effect of the laws they create.

K.U. customers set record for electrical demand

With temperatures breaking records the last two weekends in what many are describing as one of the coldest spells of the century, Kentucky Utilities set new records for electrical demand both locally and statewide.

The all-time high peak in electricity from KU across the state was reached last Monday at 2,330,000 kilowatts (kw).

Local K.U. manager John Burke said Tuesday that the statewide system has the capacity to handle 2,600,000 kw.

The local K.U. office also set records with the County's demand jumping to 4,608 kw to top the old peak set in January and August of last year at 4,440.

The city demand peaked at 2,068 kw. That tied the old high mark set in January and July of last year.

Burke said that the capacity for the county service is 6,750 kw and for city service, 2,750. "We're in pretty good shape," he said. The only problem that

Jackets drop one game

An expected heated game between Paris and Nicholas County Saturday night was canceled because of inclement weather, giving the Jackets only one game last week.

That game was a heartbreaking 70-69 loss at the hands of Richmond Model in Richmond.

Linescore:

Nicholas County [49]- Woosley 7, Mattox 9, Webb 7, Anderson 21, McGuffey 25.

Richmond Model [70]- Wiggins 22, Dunlon 16, Cole 2, Ellis 3, Bouge 17, Barkley 2, Fellner 6.

Burke said the high demand would have on the county now would be that "should we lose a base circuit at substation, we would have to pick up service in stages."

The new statewide peak was about 4½ percent greater than the forecast for this winter and 8.7 percent greater than last winter's peak of 2,143,000 kw recorded on Monday, Jan. 12, 1981. The previous all-time peak demand was 2,135,000 kw on Wednesday, July 16, 1980.

The severity of the bone-chilling weather was also demonstrated when customers set a new record for use of electricity on a weekend. Heaviest demand normally occurs, according to K.U. officials, on weekdays when factories, businesses and schools are operating.

While the frigid weather caused a heavy heating load on K.U. system, it also resulted in scattered outages across the state.
