Kentucky Business Scene

(c) 1982, Kentucky Business Ledger

At first glance, the fourth quarter 1981 profit gains of Kentucky's publicly-held companies are astonishing. At second glance they're somewhat less than that — but still aren't bad.

The 23 companies included in Kentucky Business Ledger's survey of fourth quarter profits earned a total of $196 million. That translates into a whopping increase of 40 percent when compared to their 1980 fourth quarter earnings of $140 million.

Such a performance in normal times would be impressive, but coming as it did during the depths of a recession it is downright astounding.

But wait. The figures do require a second glance. When the profit results of Kentucky's four largest publicly-held firms — Ashland Oil, Texas Gas Transmission, Humana and Capital Holding — are subtracted, the picture changes from astounding to good.

Ashland Oil, the state's largest public company, for instance, earned $47.5 million in the quarter ended Dec. 31, or a 135 percent increase over the $20.2 million it earned in the comparable 1980 period.

While not as sizable, the quarterly performances of Texas Gas, Humana and Capital Holding were healthy nonetheless.

Texas Gas, the Owensboro-based energy and transportation company, earned $26.5 million in the fourth quarter for a 43.7 percent gain over fourth-quarter 1980 results. The firm's 1981 quarterly performance even included a $10.1 million write-off related to the Alaskan pipeline project.

Humana, the rapidly-growing hospital company, increased its earnings 54 percent over the comparable 1980 quarter and Capital Holding, the Louisville-based insurance holding company, posted a 32 percent profit gain in the fourth quarter.

Taken together, these four giants contributed nearly $130 million to the overall 1981 fourth-quarter profit figure of $196 million, or more than 70 percent of the total.

When the "Big Four's" profits are subtracted, it leaves a net income figure of $66 million for the 19 other companies in the survey. The comparable 1980 combined earnings of this group is $62.4 million, which means a 6.8 profit gain in the 1981 period.

While not spectacular, it is a gain, and is considerably better than the results of a nationwide survey by The Wall Street Journal. In its survey of 455 corporations, the newspaper found a six percent decline in fourth quarter earnings.

Of the 23 Kentucky companies included in the Ledger's survey, 11 posted net income gains and nine had profit declines. None reported a loss.

Two big turnarounds were Glenmore Distilleries, which went from a loss of $904,000 in the 1980 quarter to a profit of more than $2 million in the 1981 period, and Falls City Industries, which lost $1.3 million in fourth-quarter 1980 but earned $1.1 million in the 1981 period.

Falls City's profit performance was aided by an extraordinary credit consisting of a tax benefit on the write-off of motor carrier operating rights. The 1980 period, conversely, suffered because of an extraordinary charge for the write-off of those operating rights.

Kentucky's biggest gainer for the quarter, in percentage terms, was United Kentucky Bank of Louisville, which advanced by 252 percent over the previous year's fourth quarter due to what Chairman Leonard B. Marshall Jr. called "a significant reduction in our provision for loan losses." United Kentucky is in the process of merging with Liberty National Bank, also of Louisville.

Kentucky stocks on the move last week: Market direction was downward. Leading gainers: Kentucky Utilities (NYSE), to 17¾ from 17¼; Ashland Oil (NYSE), to 23 3/8 from 23. Biggest declines: United Kentucky (OTC), to 19½ from 23½; Liberty National (OTC), to 28¼ from 30¾; Humana (NYSE), to 31 7/8 from 33¾.

Sheriff reports two accidents

There were two non-injury accidents in the county on U.S. 68 last week, accident reports in the Nicholas County Sheriff's office revealed.

According to a report filed by Sheriff Charles King, a car driven by Mark Marlowe, Brownsville, ran off the road around 1 a.m. Sunday and struck a culvert head.

King's report says that the car then ran 290 feet and clipped a telephone pole.

The report did not detail any serious injuries associated with the crash, nor did it describe any extensive damage to the vehicle.

Another accident reported by the sheriff's department happened last Thursday around 7 p.m. when a tire blew out on a van driven by Gerry Owen, Paris, on Route #68.

The blow-out caused the driver to lose control and strike a culvert, sending his vehicle into a nearby creek.

None of the five passengers in the van were seriously injured. The report did not list any major damage to the vehicle.

Fender benders dominate city accident report

Three minor fender-benders in the city last week were described in accident reports filed in the Carlisle Police Department.

The first accident occurred at 3:30 last Monday afternoon, when a car driven by John T. Barrett, 438 Sycamore Street, backed out of a parking space on Locust Street in front of a car driven by Carol G. Randolph, Route 2.

Both vehicles received only minor damage and no injuries were sustained.

The second mishap occurred at 4:32 last Monday afternoon at the corner of Elm Street and the alley behind Garrett's Furniture, when a car driven by Kevin Watkins, Cliffway Drive, collided with a car driven by Jane Hamilton, 206 Williamsburg Terrace, Paris.

According to the accident report filed by city Patrolman Jim Coy, Watkins was heading up Elm Street and attempting to turn into the alley, while Hamilton was turning off Elm into Leet's Laundromat when the two cars collided and locked rear bumpers.

Only minor damage was reported to the vehicles and there were no injuries.

The third accident took place at 4:30 Friday afternoon on North Broadway, when a car driven by Ernest Waugh, Route 3, struck a car driven by Kenneth Cartmill Jr., Route 3, as Waugh was backing out of a parking place.

Only minor damage was reported. There were no injuries.

CALLING BEFORE U DIG SAVES TIME AND MONEY

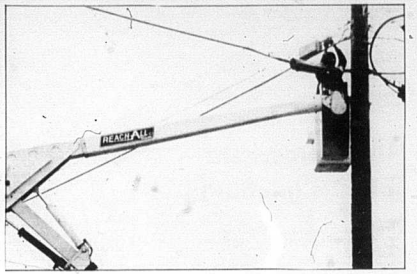
Spring is the time to start a garden. But, before you begin, do yourself and your neighbor a favor and make a phone call.

Carlisle residents digging holes for fence posts, swimming pools or new house foundations, even gardens, may accidentally cut underground utility lines. And severed lines mean phone service, electric power or other utilities may be out at your house or a number of houses in your neighborhood.

"To prevent interruptions in electric, gas, water or telephone service, diggers should call the Kentucky Underground Utility Protection Center," said Carol Renz, District Manager. Personnel at the center will locate any underground lines on your property.

"The center has been nicknamed BUD to remind you to call Before U Dig," he said. BUD's toll-free number is 1-800-752-6007.

Contractors should also call this number before digging or blasting.



Up, up and away

It might be fun to be up in the air atop this equipment on a nice sunny day. But it was spring-like in Carlisle Monday and the rains came down as these repairs were made at the corner of Main and Sycamore Streets. Traffic was re-directed for a time as the wet work was finished atop this utility pole. — Mercury photo.

County native, 45, runs 100 mile race

by Paul Willcut

(Editor's note: The subject of this article, Billy Purcell, is a Nicholas County native who now works for IBM in Austin, Texas. He is the brother of Mrs. Freda Sparks. The article was first published in the Austin American Statesman.)

Last Saturday in Kingwood, Billy Purcell, 45, ran 100 miles in 16 hours, 59 minutes and 48 seconds. "They started yelling at me with a few hundred yards to go to hurry up so I could break 17. I still had sprint in me."

Personally, if I had just run 99.9 miles and someone told me to hurry up, I would have punched the guy. I guess people who run 100-mile races are nicer than that. Purcell certainly seems to be. He's also real patient with dumb questions.

"Did you run on Sunday?" That's a stock question reporters ask marathoners. It indicates respect to ask if the runner had a workout on the day immediately following the race. Billy didn't quite know how to answer. He paused. "Well . . . Sunday was when I finished up." I figured it out. The race started at 2 p.m. Saturday. Purcell, who was third, crossed the finish line at 6:59 a.m. Sunday.

Purcell did take a three-mile walk with his wife on Monday, and he said it felt pretty good. Of course, you have to realize that he apparently didn't expect to feel good at all. "I've got real strong legs, I guess. Today I can touch 'em."

Race strategy was to use the Osler method and hope for the best. Tom Osler, a champion ultra-distance runner, alternates running and walking and uses large quantities of very sweet tea. Relatively unconditioned people claim that this regimen is miraculous. The Kingwood course consisted of 16 10-kilometer loops and it was convenient for Purcell to run 2.6 miles and walk a half mile taking a drink during every walking portion.

The walking makes the whole thing sound less remarkable, but "after 75 or 80 miles, the walking was harder than the running."

Purcell tried to run at a steady pace of 8:15 per mile, but it was faster at the beginning, and slower at the end. Pace and other matters were given close attention and finely tuned.

The sweet tea, for example, was made according to a formula — 2½ gallons of tea containing 2½ pounds of sugar and 24 ounces of honey. He started the race taking 10½ ounces every three miles, but because the weather was relatively cool — in the 50s — he didn't sweat all that much and had to stop frequently to go to the bathroom. He adjusted his dosage to 8½ ounces and had no further problems.

At 50 miles Purcell felt so good that he told his handlers "to start tracking those people in front and let me know how we're doing." Purcell thought that a little later in the race he might try to catch the leaders. Between 50 and 75 miles he gained about 10 minutes on them. When his pit crew told him that, he explained to them that "what I said at 50 miles no longer holds true."

The way to get through a feat like a 100-mile race is, says Purcell, to pay your training dues and use the Osler method. He has only been running three years but since last December when he ran the White Rock Marathon in 2:50, Purcell has run 125 miles or more every week. He peaked at 152.

Purcell was also helped by an ability to put things in their most favorable light. Late in the race — at around 75 miles — he was feeling about like you would expect, but he found hope and energy in the observation that he had only four laps to go. Of course, each lap was 6.2 miles long, and their total was about the same length as a marathon.

"It's all in how you look at it," he says.

And how do you feel after you've run 100 miles?

"When I crossed the line I had a great sense of accomplishment." Besides that "my legs and down in my groin and places like that really began to hurt. And then I passed out."

Purcell's time was a national record for his age group.

In the immediate future Purcell is "just going to take it easy for awhile and run the Capitol 10,000." That ought to be like walking around the block.

County woman beaten, robbed

Kentucky State Police Detective Jeff Jett arrested Ricky Blair Feeback, age 38, of Route 3, Carlisle, Tuesday morning, and charged him in the beating and robbery of a Nicholas County woman at her home near Headquarters.

According to Det. Jett, Feeback has been charged with first degree burglary after he and another unidentified suspect allegedly robbed Sally Masters, 45, of Route 3, Carlisle.

Jett said that Mrs. Masters had come back to her home after doing outside chores around 10 a.m., and that upon returning she confronted two white males who "robbed and beat her."

Mrs. Masters was taken to the Nicholas County Hospital. No report on her condition was available at press time Tuesday.

Feeback was lodged in the Nicholas County Jail. The incident is still under investigation by Kentucky State Police detectives.
