Kay's Kitchen

By Kay Fisher

Time to start thinking about the Halloween pumpkin. And it should be selected with care, especially if you are going to use it for cooking. This must be a good pumpkin year. I've seen them in the fields, and plenty of them. When selecting a pumpkin, look for a hard rind, bright orange color and a firm stem. From what I've said, size does not seem to be of much importance. Naturally I'm talking about pumpkin for eating.

Cut the pumpkin in half and scrape out the seeds and fibers. Rinse the seeds and save for roasting. Place halves cut side down on a baking sheet. 350-degree oven. Bake about 1 hour, until the meat is tender and falls out from the shell. Put through a ricer or strainer. If the pulp is not to be used immediately, freeze in plastic bags or boxes. It keeps 6 months from one harvest to the next.

You now are ready to make delicious pies, cakes, muffins, breads, and even soup. One hint I read recently to make a lighter pumpkin is to add sugar and spices to the pumpkin and allow to "season" overnight; then add the sugar just before ready to bake. Makes sense to me. Makes a lighter pie, too.

PUMPKIN SOUP
from San Francisco Junior League Cookbook, San Francisco A La Carte

4 tablespoons butter
4 green onions and tops, chopped
1 small onion, minced
2 tablespoons flour
4 cups chicken stock
3 cups pumpkin puree
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon white pepper
½ cup half and half
Croutons

Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter until foaming, add onions and saute until limp. Sprinkle with flour, cook and stir for 3 minutes, then gradually add chicken stock. Cook and stir until smooth and thickened. Add pumpkin puree, seasonings and half-and-half. Reheat without boiling and adjust seasonings to taste. Stir in remaining 1 tablespoon butter until just melted. Serve immediately, topped with croutons.

PUMPKIN WALNUT BREAD

1¼ cups cooked pumpkin
½ cups firmly packed brown sugar
½ cup butter, room temperature
2 eggs, room temperature
5 cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon each salt and nutmeg
2 cups chopped walnuts

Grease two 9½x4½-inch loaf pans. In a large bowl, mix pumpkin, brown sugar, butter and eggs. Sift together flour, baking powder, cinnamon, salt and nutmeg. Add dry ingredients to pumpkin mixture and mix thoroughly. Stir in walnuts. Preheat oven to 350 degrees (325 degrees for glass pans).

Pour mixture into pans and push sides higher than in the middle to help compensate for the rising crown during baking. Bake about 1 hour or until knife comes out clean when testing. Allow bread to cool 10 minutes before turning out of pans. Warm quick bread is more fragile than yeast bread and should be handled with care. Freezes well.

PUMPKIN NUT BARS

1 cup flour
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
1½ teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
¾ cup cooked mashed pumpkin
½ cup shortening
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup chopped pecans
Powdered sugar

Combine first 2 ingredients in large bowl; add next 3 ingredients. Beat at medium speed until smooth. Stir in pecans. Pour into a greased and floured 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes or until done. Cool; sprinkle with powdered sugar. Cut into bars.

Little Rock Church youth in program

"Down by the Creekbank," a musical program, was presented by the Little Rock Christian Church youth and youth sponsors at the September fellowship meal and program. The program was written by the noted gospel music personality, Dottie Rambo.

Using humor and laughter, as well as the serious and sacred, the words and music of the 20th century parallel the 1st century Biblical truths. Although Jesus' first disciples were fishermen of the Sea of Galilee, the musical takes place along a fishing creekbank. Being Me, I Am Adopted, Love Is, Multiply, He Plants Me Like a Seed and Is There Anything I Can Do For you were song titles used.

The program was a combined church effort. The cast ranged in ages from three to adult. Costumes and props were homemade and brought realism to the setting. This was the first time the entire program had been presented.

Portions of the program had been presented at Edgemoll Manor Nursing Home in Cynthiana and at Sardis Christian Church in Mason County.

Family operations profiled on 'N. KY'

The venerable general store in the center of Rabbit Hash, Ky., the beautiful fruit of Valley Orchards and the quiet, rustic efficiency of the Anderson Ferry are featured in the edition of 'N. KY.', Wednesday, Oct. 30 at 7:30 p.m. on KET.

Local Boone County hire manians Rabbit Hash was called Meek's Landing, then Carrollton. There was a lot of postal confusion, since there was a Carrollton, Ky., already on the map. The confusion ended after a harsh 1899 winter when all the area Residents survived by making rabbit hash. Eventually the town adopted the name Rabbit Hash.

At the center of town in Rabbit Hash, there is a general store established in 1831. The grandson of the first proprietor, Mr. Wilson, and Elizabeth Stephens, granddaughter of the second store keeper, recite a rich history about the store.

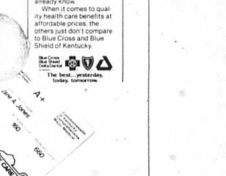
Also featured are Harold Hempling and his brothers, fourth generation owners of Valley Orchards, which are located between Constance and Taylor Port, and Richard Cottmeyer, fourth generation owner/operator of the Anderson Ferry, who comments on life on the Ohio River.

Some apples are really lemons.

When it comes to some thing as important as your health care coverage, you should compare apples to apples. But take a close look at some of the insurance plans compared to Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kentucky, and you'll find some real lemons. With several of these plans you give up your freedom to choose your own doctor or hospital. Others don't offer the same amount of coverage for your dollars. None of them negotiate with doctors and hospitals on your behalf the way we do.

So go ahead and compare. You'll discover what 1.4 million Kentuckians already know.

When it comes to quality health care benefits at affordable prices, the others just don't compare to Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kentucky.



The Best...yesterday, today, tomorrow.
