The historic spot at Bryant Station, five miles from Lexington, on which stood a fort where a famous battle was fought between the Indians and the white settlers, will soon be marked appropriately in commemoration of that event. The local chapter of the Daughters of American Revolution has taken steps to erect a monument on the site of the old fort. Their most important work, however, is already completed, for they have erected at the spring at the foot of the hill a memorial tablet on which are inscribed the names of the brave women who risked their lives at the hands of the besieging Indians to carry water to their husbands, fathers, brothers and sons within the beleaguered fort. The battle was fought on August 16, more than 100 years ago, and on August 16 next these patriotic women will dedicate the monument.

GEN. GEORGE W. JONES, who died Wednesday night in Dubuque, Ia., had a long and interesting career. Born in Indiana in 1804, he entered Transylvania University at Lexington in 1821, with Henry Clay his guardian, and Jefferson Davis one of his classmates. He served as escort to both Jackson and Lafayette, was on the staff of Gen. Dodge in the Blackhawk war, went to Congress in 1834, representing both Michigan and Wisconsin in the House, and later the new State of Iowa in the Senate. Defeated for re-election because of his connection with the Cilley-Graves duel, he entered the diplomatic service and was recalled and imprisoned for writing a friendly letter to his old college chum Davis, at that time (1861) the official head of the Southern Confederacy.—[Louisville Times.

INTERVIEW WITH JUDGE BECKNER.

There are some kickers here against the action of the Chicago Convention, but as a general thing our Democrats will support the ticket cordially. We asked Judge Beckner yesterday what he thought of the situation.

"We are going to elect him by a tremendous majority," he answered. "The platform has some things in it that I would prefer not to find there, but when was it that every member of the party had his own way exactly? Platforms are to be taken as a whole and are usually made up of planks that give each man something to stand on. The Democratic declaration of principles is wholly in the interest of the masses. The Republican confession of faith is framed entirely for the benefit of the classes. So far as the financial featured are concerned, I do not see why any Cleveland Democrat should vote the Republican ticket or give it the aid and comfort of refusing to support Bryan. The present Republican Congress treated the recommendations of Cleveland and Carlisle with utter contempt. The President and his Secretary both urged that the endless chain by which the gold reserve is depleted should be stopped by retiring the greenbacks. The Republicans from John Sherman down hooted at this and have hurrahed for greenbacks with as much ardor as Peffer himself. When did McKinley say he is opposed to free silver? He accepts the gold platform because he wants to be President. The platform adopted at St. Louis is only for a single standard until other countries ...

From Martin County.

INEZ, KY., July 18, 1896.

Editor Democrat,

Catlettsburg, Ky.

DEAR SIR:—I wish to express through your valuable paper my approval of the true Democratic platform made at Chicago and with the nominees that will carry us to victory. But I much regret to see men claiming to appear in sheep's clothing, patted on the back by the gold kings of Wall street and London, and continually hallooing "gold, gold, gold!"

I have been a Democrat for forty years, and during all this time it has been a cardinal principle of Democracy to make both gold and silver equal in debt-paying and purchasing power with no discrepancy for or against either. If this is not Democracy on the question of coinage, I have been in the dark. But one thing I do know—that, like Moses, I will never worship the golden calf while I profess to be a friend to the millions that are groaning under the heel of the gold tyrants. The people are with us, and they are the wisest and the best.

THAT CAKE WALK.

BLUE LICK SPRINGS, July 29, '96.

If you are afflicted with that worst of all diseases—the "Blues"—come to the Pavillion Hotel, Blue Lick Springs, Ky., and all depression and despondency will at once be dispelled and you will eat three excellent meals a day, and the days will be filled with rest and quiet and innocent pleasures, which are so sweet after a long period spent in the whirl of society, dissipations, or in the conflict with business cares or household duties.

Proprietor Geo R. Foster and his estimable wife are meeting with deserved success this season, and their house is filled with cultured and delightful people of this and other States.

Rest, and the benefits to be derived from the water are the chief ends in view when these Springs are visited, but methods of amusement are not wanting. Most of the guests find enjoyment in croquet, lawn tennis, boating, cards or dancing. Then there are many places of historical interest within easy reach of the hotel, and on every hand most beautiful and picturesque scenery.

On Tuesday afternoon the heat was so oppressive as to become almost unbearable, and several of the guests were rapidly falling into a state of ennui. Just at this critical moment, the fertile mind of Hon. J. A. Walton, of Germantown, who with his wife, are guests at the hotel, came to the rescue and suggested a "Cake Walk" for the evening. The proposition met with unanimous approval, and immediately everything was stir and bustle in preparation for the event. The cook was at once interviewed and a large cake was promised as first prize. At 9 o'clock everything was in readiness and all repaired to the large pavillion, where most of the guests participated in the walk. Happy as children they marched round and round the pavillion. Each sally of brilliant wit was followed by ringing shouts of laughter, which were redoubled when some awkward man made a vain attempt to walk gracefully. Under the rules of the contest the most graceful couple were to be awarded first prize—a large and beautiful cake—and the couple who displayed the most marked want of grace were to receive the booby prize—a mammoth and odorous onion. ...

Compulsory Educational Law.

Now that the Fall term of the public schools is beginning there is much inquiry concerning the terms of the Compulsory Education Law, which is now in force.

Every parent, guardian or other person having control of a child between the age of seven and fourteen years, must send the same to a public or private school at least eight consecutive weeks, unless the child is taught at home the same studies that are taught in the public school, and shall stand the same examinations that the children of the public schools do, or unless mental or moral condition of the child shall render it impracticable for him to attend, or unless the child is excused by the trustees or Board of Education upon being shown that the parent or guardian is too poor to feed or clothe the child, or that the child already knows the branches to be taught, or that there is no school house within two miles of where the child resides.

If a person fails to send the child under the foregoing conditions, he shall be fined from five to twenty dollars for the first offense and from ten to fifty dollars for the subsequent offense. It is the duty of school trustees of county districts and the President of the City Board of Education to investigate the matter, and shall notify in writing any parent or guardian remiss, and in five days if legal cause is shown shall proceed against the offender.

If any trustee or President of the Board of Education shall fail to prosecute in good faith any parent or guardian within ten days after receiving written notice from any taxpayer, unless the person complained of shall be excused, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty for the benefit of the district.

Any parent who shall make any false statement for the purpose of evading the law, shall be fined from five to twenty dollars, the fine to go for the benefit of the district. If upon the trial of any case under this law, the prosecution is shown to be malicious, the costs of the trial shall be assessed against the complainant. Trials under this law may be held in the court of a Justice of the Peace or any other court of record.
