REBECCA BRIGHAM is the wife of a traveling salesman and she does not know where her husband is, although she is still awaiting his return in New York. What she does know, however, is that before departing on his last trip her husband sold her to George A Greenberg for $600. Consequently Greenberg "took possession" of his bargain. She, however, loves her husband and in perfect good faith has appealed to the courts to know if the "sale" was authentic. All the parties are Russians

Scott more Attenuine have been measured, but Europe cannot interfere, for no interference will stand Turkish power, and then turkey will have to be divided, and then there will be a fight over the division, and all the Powers are afraid of that. The horrors of all the persecutions of the early Christians have been surpassed by the cruelties practiced by the Turks in the last two years. The absolute indifference with which the European powers have looked on these atrocities is outrageous.

AFTER Judge W. B. Smith and H. J. Breckinridge had spoken at Shelbyville, Monday, Cap. W. H. Jones, a member of the Republican State Committee, took the stand and replied to the speeches of the orators, and he would fight from now on to Bryan.

THE Richmond Climax: "Hon. A. T. Chenault offered Miller Bradley $65 per acre for a farm recently bought by Mr. Bradley for which he paid $52 per acre, provided Bryan and a Congress favorable to him were not elected and that he would obligate payment in gold.

MAYSVILLE, KY., Oct. 20.—Asbury Pollitt, a farmer living in the eastern part of Mason county, started for Maysville on the Sunday hack. He has said he had but thirty-a quarter. In the afternoon he met Mr. Wood, who told him he wanted to sell his horse. Pollitt upon Silvey offered Pollitt one dozen eggs for the animal. The trade was finally narrowed. Pollitt accepted the offer.

This is what the fear of Bryan's election is bringing the country! The fear of having to take fifty cents dollar for his horse drove Pollitt to ratiate.

A BRANDENBURG woman has announced what she calls a "woman's tariff," says the News. It is composed of a hoe and flexible cane. When her husband's smoke-grime unbearable the hoe is loosened over his head and the cane is conducted into the cellar. There must be no fuss at all the cellar since the disorder was moved.

HERE is a problem:—A farmer and his wife started a hog and they wished to weigh it. The man weighed 150 pounds and the woman 175 pounds. They put a board across the house so that when they sat down upon it they exactly balanced. Then they killed the hog and carried the board to the hog, just balancing the board across. What was the weight of the hog?

BUTTERFLIES.

How to the chorelapped the great grove

Where the graceful deer were lying,
Where the wood-birds sang their loves
And the bees were busy flying;
Where the golden sunlight fell
Through the leaves in showers,
Where the fairies built their cells
Of the fragrant wild flowers;

Where the rippling water sang
Through the mossy hollow,
Where the wild-vine's tendrils clung
To the branches of the willow;
Where the cooling shadows lay
Through the noontide hours,
Where the butterflies at play
Sported with the flowers;

Where the sunset's golden ray
Lingered on the mountain,
Where the evening's silver gray
Rested on the fountain;
Where the moonbeams fell at night
Through the forest bowers,
Where the butterflies took flight
Sported with the flowers.

Where the spirit of the dead
Wandered in the morning,
Where the angels fled
When the night was dawning;
Where the first faint blush of day
Kissed the earth and flowers,
Where the butterflies at play
Sported with the flowers.

Where the heart is pure and free
From the world's temptations,
Where the mind delights to be
Free from earth's vexations;
Where the loved ones meet again
In the heavenly bowers,
Where the butterflies remain
Sported with the flowers.

A MERE SUGGESTION.

Phyllis was young and very happy and just a little excited, and perhaps a little nervous, for it was the first time before her friend Maud, who was almost as much excited as herself, that she was ever entrusted to begin herself the duties of housekeeping. Phyllis and her friend Maud, however, were not exactly anxious that her friend should be present at the interview. At least as little as possible, for naturally Phyllis was not a little
