We're Celebrating 125 Years Of Serving Nicholas County

Blue Licks Battlefield State Park to open April 1

BLUE LICKS — April 1st is opening day for Blue Licks Battlefield State Park and besides the traditional full scale Blue Licks Battle re-enactment campers and local people look forward to every year, the park has other major special events lined up.

Topping the list will be the appearance of the all-time leading scorer for the University of Kentucky Wildcats, newly appointed Kentucky Secretary of Tourism Dan Issel.

Issel will make his appearance during Blue Licks summer season on July 11 to sign autographs and meet park visitors during the first Blue Licks baseball card exposition at the Worthington Center.

Bob Johnson, manager of the state park, has been hard at work preparing special events for the state park campers as well as major events for the entire public.

In addition to special events around the park, Johnson announced the Blue Licks Pioneer Museum is currently exhibiting an antique doll collection in the museum's lower level. The dolls, which represents a significant aspect American craft-making were especially donated to the park for display.

In addition, Johnson has been negotiating for a new display for historic enthusiasts.

The emphasis of the display will trace the evolution of tool making in the early frontier, from the crude stone tools crafted by early native Americans to those employed by frontiersmen in the early days of American westward expansion.

"I'm still working out the details to have this display brought to the Pioneer Museum for the season. Hopefully we will get a guarantee on it in the next few weeks and be able to work on expanding the Blue Licks museum offerings," Johnson said.

But definitely on this season's agenda is the traditional Blue Licks Battle Reenactment, Johnson said. His ambition for the August celebration is to try and have both the "Simon Kenton Outdoor Drama" to run on evenings and the battle re-enactment during the day, but negotiations to have both have not been confirmed.

"All I can say definitely is that the Battle re-enactment will be on the agenda. But we're keeping our fingers crossed for more. I think both dramatizations would enhance our traditional August commemoration of the historic event," Johnson said.

As to regular daily attractions, the camp is open for use, Johnson said. Rentals of the Worthington Center and shelters are going fast, Johnson said, so people planning on family reunions should act quickly to get their reservations in before all open slots are taken.

Construction of the cabins along the Licking River have been held up, but Johnson said planners are hoping to have them finished and ready for rental during this season.

"We're very excited about the cabins. Their progress has picked up and they're looking beautiful," Johnson said.

The pool opens officially on Memorial Day.

Arbor Day a tribute to forestry products

The idea for Arbor Day originally came from Nebraska. A visit to Nebraska today wouldn't disclose that the state was once a treeless plain. Yet it was the lack of trees there that led to the founding of Arbor Day in the 1800's.

Among pioneers moving into the Nebraska Territory in 1854 was J. Sterling Morton from Detroit. He and his wife were lovers of nature and the home they established in Nebraska's was quickly planted with trees, shrubs and flowers.

Morton was a journalist and soon became editor of Nebraska's first newspaper. Given that forum, he spread agricultural information and his enthusiasm for trees to an equally enthusiastic audience. His fellow pioneers missed their trees. But more importantly, trees were needed as windbreaks to keep soil from blowing and for fuel and building materials, as well as shade from the hot sun.

Morton not only advocated tree planting by individuals in his articles and editorials, but he also encouraged civic organizations and groups of every kind to join in. His prominence in the area increased and he became secretary of the Nebraska Territory, which provided another opportunity to stress the value of trees.

On January 4, 1972, Morton first proposed a tree planting holiday to be called "Arbor Day," at a meeting of the State Board of Agriculture. The date was set for April 10, 1872. Prizes were offered to counties and individuals for planting properly the largest number of trees on that day. It was estimated that more than one million trees were planted in Nebraska on the first Arbor Day.

Arbor Day was officially proclaimed by the young state's Gov. Robert W. Furnas on March 12, 1874, and the day itself was observed April 8, 1874. In 1883, Arbor Day was named a legal holiday in Nebraska and April 22, Morton's birthday, was selected as the date for its observance. In 1888 Nebraska's Arbor Day was moved to the last Friday in April which is also observed as National Arbor Day.

During the 1870's other states passed legislation to observe Arbor Day, and the tradition began in schools in 1882.

Today the most common date for the state observances is the last Friday in April, and several U.S. presidents have proclaimed a national Arbor Day on that date. But a number of state Arbor Days are at other times to coincide with the best tree-planting weather, from January and February in the south to May in the far north.

Arbor Day has now spread beyond the United States and is observed in many countries of the world. In some it is the king or queen who leads the national celebrations and in many countries exotic trees not suited to North America are planted in commemoration of the day.

J. Sterling Morton was proud of the success of Arbor Day and noted, "Other holidays repose upon the past. Arbor Day proposes for the future." He thought trees much superior to cold marble as a memorial to persons or events. "How much more enduring are the animated trees of our own planting," he said.
