Church Corner

Pastor, Shrine of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church

Think of all the electronic appliances that you have in your home. You probably own a VCR. In the kitchen you will find a microwave oven. Many homes have computers. For the most part we know how to operate these appliances, but most likely we do not understand how they actually work.

It is a common thing to tape record a TV show or watch a rented movie on our VCR. But do we know how these images are stored on a small strip of tape? Do we understand how the recording heads work?

The same goes for the microwave oven. How does it cook an entire meal in a matter of minutes? Where do these invisible waves come from? Where do they go after they cook the meal?

Today many people sit before computer terminals to do their jobs. We type at a keyboard and letter or images appear on a screen. Push a button and you can store what is on the screen in the computer. Push another button and you can get a printout of what has already been stored.

It probably doesn't matter to the average person on how these marvels of modern technology actually work. As long as someone is around to repair them when they break.

What about when they break? "The computer is down" has become a dreaded phrase in our language. No business can be transacted. No projects can be completed. Often one's work can't be completed because needed information is "locked" in the computer.

The same goes for a broken VCR or microwave oven. We can't watch that rented movie or tape that long-awaited TV show. Can anyone prepare a quick meal in a conventional oven? One wonders how we ever lived without these marvels of technology. Theat wasn't so long ago.

Try taking one of these appliances apart yourself. All you will find are bundles of wire, circuit boards and transistors. Unless you have some training in electronics you won't be able to make heads or tails out of this maze of components.

Sometimes we understand God in the same way we understand the marvels of modern technology. We can say that we believe in God, But we have to think a bit if someone asks us, "Who is God?" If God ever seems absent from our lives we miss Him, or we feel a certain emptiness.

In coming to an understanding of who God is, certain images come to mind. God the Father is pictured as the old man with His arms outstretched over the entire universe. God the Son could be pictured as we might see Him in a painting of the Good Shepherd. The Holy Spirit is usually pictured as a dove.

Other images might go back to what you learned about God in your childhood. He could be seen as a vindictive judge punishing sinners. Another image could be that of a loving Father who sent His Son to save the human race from their sins. Still another image could be the God who created us and keep us in existence.

We cannot understand everything that there is to know about God. That is because He has only revealed so much about Himself in Sacred Scripture. Also, our human minds are limited in what we can understand about the majesty and splendor of God.

We may be able to do without computers, VCRs and microwave ovens. However, we cannot do without God. So we must try to get to know Him. This can be done by reading the Bible and by prayer. Knowing how much God really does love and care for us can give one an entire new outlook on life.

God has given us another summer season. Perhaps your pace of life may slow down. Use the time to get to know God. You can't do without Him.

CAC Headstart receives national accreditation

Community Action Council's Nicholas County Head Start program is among the growing number of head start programs in the United States to be accredited by the National Academy of Early Childhood Programs. The Academy recognizes outstanding Early Childhood Programs which meet national standards of quality. Nicholas County Head Start, located at 149 Scrub Grass Road in Carlisle, serves 58 children from ages 3 to 5 according to its director, Missy Lyons.

"Accreditation helps answer the question, "What is a quality preschool program?" said Dr. Marilyn Smith, executive director of the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC), the nation's oldest and largest association of early childhood professionals, which sponsors the Academy. "Most parents want to find the highest quality program for their young children; however, few parents know how to assess whether a program meets more than just the minimum standards required by the state licensing."

the Academy's standards were developed over a three year period with input from thousands of educators and administrators from across the country. In 1985, the first program was accredited by NAEYC. Now in 1993, there are over 2500 programs from across the country, including U.S. military installations around the world, that have been accredited by the Academy.

"Accreditation is not meant to replace parents' on-site visits to centers as a means of selecting the program that best meets their child's needs," Smith said, "but accreditation does help parents to recognize the varied components that should be present in a quality program."

To become accredited, Nicholas County Head Start had to meet a variety of strict criteria related to providing a developmentally appropriate program for preschool-aged children. These criteria range from having a well qualified and trained staff to meeting stringent health and safety standards. In addition, the program must provide opportunities for parental involvement. Accreditation includes an on-site study of the program by professional validators and a final review by a three member panel of commissioners who are experts in the field of early childhood education. The nationwide accreditation of early childhood programs, such personnel, and society.

The Lady

The lady was here to serve God. To give life, to give love, and to receive love.
She was born on Earth for 75 years of hard work, hard luck, and you, hard times.
But not once did she give up.
She, The lady, has a lot of special people in the 75 years here, but always knew God would take care of them, until she could be with them.
She, The lady, only asked one thing from life. That people love each other and trust the Lord.
She, The lady, was a caring person who loved her children.
She has three sons and a loving daughter who were her life.
She, The lady, also had a special place for her grandchildren, who she always had a lot of time and love for.
She, The lady, loved life, nature, the place she called home.
I miss the lady, who for 75 years was my life, and my gift from God was to know this lady.
When it is my time to leave this earth, I will go with my sins and heart ready to receive the life after, and to know I will be with the person I call The Lady.
You say out "Who is she lady?"
Well, it is my grandmother, who I will miss dearly. Thank You, God, for This Lady.
Mrs. Lucinda Bailey — The Lady
