AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Five Years Ago...

February 7, 1991

Nicholas County posted the state's highest unemployment rate, 13.0 percent, in figures released February 4 by the Kentucky Department of Human Resources. Spud Marshall, Executive Director of Carlisle-Nicholas County Industrial Authority, says there are many actors leading to the increase.

"One thing that hurt us was the Whirlpool closing in Mt. Sterling. Quite a few Nicholas Countians worked there. The IBM layoffs in Lexington also have some affect on the figure." The slow economy and the resulting slow Christmas retail season also have some effect.

The 1990 United States Census results are in, and that could mean changes for Nicholas Countians.

According t the government figures, Nicholas County experienced a drop in population from 7424 in 1980 to 6725 in the current count, a decrease of 699, or 9.4 percent.

DEATHS - Ralph J. Clark, 61, died in a traffic accident near his home in Monroe, NC. He was a native of Nicholas County, graduate of Headquaters High School and a veteran of WWII. He was the son of Beaulene Porter Smith of Edgemont Nursing Home, Cynthiana, KY.

Report to Kentucky

SENATOR WENDELL FORD

U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510

A FEW TEETH MARKS LATER, MOTOR VOTER GETS THE MBS UP FROM SUPREME COURT

When asked what it was like to play against a particular team, a former Chicago Bear's player told the reporter that, "At half-time we came in, pulled off our socks and began putting iodine on the teeth marks."

I know how he felt. Opponents to increasing access to voter registration have been nipping at our heels every step of the way. But recent Supreme Court action on the 1993 Motor Voter law may have finally muzzled opponents.

The law is pretty simple, calling on states to simply offer voter registration to people applying for either a drivers license or government benefits. But opponents called it an unfunded mandate to the states and after losing in the lower courts, took their case all the way to the Supreme Court, which refused to hear it.

The non-partisan Congressional Budget Office estimated that the law would cost between $20 and $25 million nationwide. That's far below the threshold of $50 million for unfunded state mandates set by both Republicans and Democrats last year.

And there's no indication that one party is benefiting over another. In Kentucky and the rest of the nation, the biggest surge was in the Independent column, with Democratic and Republican registration running about even.

There's no instant solution for getting more Americans involved in the democratic process and participating in elections, but Motor Voter has and continues to accomplish what it set out to do — create greater access to the democratic process for all Americans. In the last 11 months, Motor Voter has registered more than a million voters per month. That's twice the usual rate.

And while that didn't necessarily translate into votes on last election day, it was an important first step in reconnecting the American people with their government.

In the end, the Motor Voter law is about opportunity, creating greater access to government for all citizens. It's in the same tradition as laws to abolish poll taxes and literacy tests, and Abraham Lincoln's call for "Government of the people, by the people and for the people."

And that's worth suffering a few teeth marks to achieve.

February 4 through 10 is Burn Awareness Week

LOUISVILLE - Each year, more than one million children are treated for burn injuries.

Children suffer the greatest number of burns and have the highest percentage of fire and burn deaths.

Scald burns are the most common burn injury, followed by contact, chemical and electrical burns. But, burns are preventable.

"Anyone who is responsible for a child's safety-including parents, grandparents, babysitters and older siblings-should have a basis understanding of the risk of burns in the home," says Sharon Rengers, R.N., of the Kosair Children's Hospital. Office of Child Advocacy.

It doesn't take much to burn through the delicate skin of a young child. Kosair Children's Hospital offers the following suggestions to protect your family and prevent burns in your home:

IN THE KITCHEN

•Children should be supervised whenever they are in the kitchen, particularly you are cooking. Establish a "safe area" in the kitchen where a child can be placed away from risk, but also under supervision.

Teach your child not to touch the stove. Whenever possible, use rear burners.

Pots on the stove should always have the handle turned to the back. Keep electric appliance cords away from edges of counters and out of the reach of childre. Disconnect them when not in use.

Keep all hot liquids out of reach and do not set a container of hot liquid on a napkin or towel that can be pulled off a counter.

Never handle containers of hot liquid or cook while holding or carrying a child and never sit a child on the counter while you are cooking.

Avoid using tablecloths when there are toddlers in the home.

Store all detergents, cleaning agents and other chemicals out of children's reach. Never heat bottles of baby formula or milk in the microwave.

Keep children away from microwaves, toaster ovens and other cooking appliances until they are old enough to use them properly.

IN THE BATHROOM

Lower your water heater thermostat setting to 120-125 degrees F. Each year, several thousands children and adults are burned by tap water that is too hot. At 130 degrees, a serious burn can occur in 30 seconds.

At 140 degrees, only five seconds are required. Bath thermometers and anti-scald devices are available. Run cold water into the tub first, then add hot water to reach a safe temperature.

Generally, the water in a childs bath should not be higher than 100 degrees F. Check the temperature of the water by moving your hand through the water for a few seconds.

If it feels hot to your hand, it will be too hot for the child. Keep the bathroom door closed and locked to prevent young children from entering the bathroom without supervision.

Always place hair dryers, curling irons and hot rollers and their electrical cords out of reach of children. Do not leave them plugged in near the tub or sink. Store all medicines, cleaning agents and chemicals out of children's reach.

IN THE LAUNDRY

Never leave a child unsupervised near a hot iron. Unplug the iron when you're not using it and store it with the cord out of reach.

Store all detergents, cleaning agents and chemicals out of children's reach. Keep children away from the wasing machine and dryer. Both appliances have the potential to cause burns.

IN ALL AREAS

Have a working smoke detector on each floor of your home and check the batteries regularly.

Keep lighters and matches away from children and attimes if you smoke, be especially careful around children. Throughout your home, place no-shock, childproof safety covers in unused electrical outlets.

Keep electric and kerosene space heaters out of children's play area and never leave a child unattended in a room with a space heater or fire burning in a fireplace.

Keep gaseoline, solvents, fertilizers, pesticedes, pool chemicals and household cleaners stored out of children's reach and, if possible, locked up.

Finally, remember to plan a family fire escape plan and practice it regularly.

For more information on burn prevention, please call 502-629-KIDS (5437) or write Kosair Children's Hospital, ATTN: Mailbox 59-4, P.O. Box 35070, Louisville, Ky 40232-5070.

Church Corner

The following is an article written by a local church official, and does not necessarily reflect the views or opinions held by The Carlisle Mercury or Park Communications, Inc.

Gen 40:7-8 So (Joseph) asked Pharaoh's officials who were in custody with him in his master's house, "Why are your faces so sad today?" "We both had dreams," they answered, "but there is no one to interpret them." Then Joseph said to them, "Do not interpretations belong to God? Tell me your dreams."

I had an amazing dream one night. I was commissioned as an artist to design and install a stained glass tunnel over a bridge. The composition I used was of women riding on white horses. The background was a bright blue, the various flesh tones of the women contrasted with the white of the hides of the horses. My concept was to create a thing of beauty over this bridge. The water surged below me, and I thought about the dangers involved in my undertaking. Each piece of glass was almost as big as I was, and the edges were sharp as I carried it to its proper place. I kept thinking that each piece had the capability to hurt me if I wasn't careful, all the while realizing that each piece was also extraordinarily beautiful.

Once completed, the tunnel would cover a bridge that cars would travel. Not only was the glass tunnel to be an object of art, but also a functioning glass shield from the elements. For all its beauty, neither car nor glass would survive a collision.

I worked long and hard, for days end. Eventually, the tunnel was complete. I stepped back and looked at this thing I had created. It was more beautiful than anything I had ever seen. That was my dream.

For days, Iried to decipher the meaning of this vision. The answers came from my own experiences. Friendships, relationships are like shards of glass; each one is unique and beautiful, but potentially dangerous. Very fragile. When we step back and look at a life composed of this unlikely material, the effect is awe-inspiring.

Lord of Visions. Lord of Bridges, Keep us in touch with the building blocks of our lives: the relationships that sustain us and bring us fear in the midst of joy. Help us to continue to grow. Amen.

Sincerely, John Wilks First Christian Church.

From The Pulpit

By Rev. Dan Bishop, Windy Hill Baptist Church

"How to get the change of heart? This simple way of being saved by faith seems so easy, and it is. Some sinner may say, "But I thought one must have a change of heart." So you must, dear sinner, but that is God's part. Jesus was talking to Nicodemus when He said, "Ye must be born again," and in the same chapter He tells Nicodemus how to get the new birth. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16 The change in your heart, sinner, is God's part and you may be sure He will attend to that. Your part is to simply believe in Him. Whatever else is necessary in your eternal salvation, the Lord attends to when you trust in Him, or believe in Him. The Lord Jesus Christ.
