Trussel says east end sewer, is a real mess

"It's a stinking mess," said Larry Trussell. And Trussell should know. He is the WEDCO District Health Department's Environmental Health Coordinator. "Not every house has a sewage problem, but a lot of them do," according to Trussell. "I get a lot of sewage and odor complaints from the east end area. When the weather gets warm and people get outdoors more, my phone starts to ring. It really is a health problem, you know. City officials are to be complimented for their efforts to try to get sanitary sewer extended to the area. I hope that a majority of the persons accept the City's offer. Sewers out there would be the finest thing," said Trussell.

City officials have sharpened their pencils and have tried to make the offer of sewer service as attractive as possible. At its may meeting, the City Council okayed the idea of sewers to the east end, but tied annexation to the offer. "It only makes sense," said Mayor Ronnie Clark. "If you want to have city services, come be a part of the city," said Clark. Our low city tax rate would be more than offset by a switch-over to inside-city water rates and garbage rates and the availability of sewer services at inside-city rates rather than outside-city rates. Local Library Trustees attend Institute

FRANKFORT, Ky. - Linda Soper and Innis Ockerman, of the Nicholas County Memorial Library Board of Trustees, attended the Public Library Trustee Institute held in May at the Radisson Plaza Hotel, in Lexington. The Institute, sponsored by the Kentucky Department for Libraries and Archives in cooperation with the Kentucky Library Trustee Association, featured the theme of "This Old Library: Tips for a Public Library Makeover."

The Institute, for trustees and library directors, was intended for those interested in renovation or face-lifts for their libraries in the near future. "This Old Library" was presented by Carol R. Brown, a Texas library consultant who has over sixteen years of experience as a building consultant, and has worked on more than 60 projects. Her range of experience covers new buildings, additions, remodeling and renovations, as well as conversion of non-library buildings. Ms. Brown is the author of Planning Library Interiors: The Selection of Furnishings for the 21st Century (published by Oryx Press, 1995).

The Institute covered practical ideas for improving a library building; the public relations and marketing aspects of having an attractive and convenient library; layouts for furniture and shelving; display and signage; new and inexpensive furnishings; and updating the library to handle new technology. Fifty library trustees from all around Kentucky attended the day-long workshop.

According to library trustee Linda Soper, there are no immediate plans for renovation of the Nicholas County Library. Ockerman and Soper attended the Institute to learn new and economical ways to improve the facility.

In Memory Of Carnell Gifford

June 8, 1938 — December 17, 1994

Thinking back on all the things that we have both been through,
I feel so glad to have had a beautiful daughter like you.
We always had good times together and shared our joys and fears,
We were there for each other through our laughter and our tears.
I miss you so very much, Carnell, as your birthday time draws near.
How I long to hold you in my arms and feel your presence near.
There was such a special bond between us and we were close as we could be
That's why on your birthday,
this special tribute to you from me.

Gladys Gifford

This memoriam should have been printed in the June 5 edition of The Carlisle Mercury. We regret the omission.
