"Jockey presents employee service awards

Ruth Ann Cordray receives a diamond ring for 25 years of faithful service to Jockey from Supervisor Robert Tout as Plant Manager Bascom Sorrell looks on.

Donnie Sharp is presented a diamond ring by Supervisor Janice Pryor for 25 years of service.

Johnny Howard receives his 10 years service award from Department Manager Ron Howard, left. Johnny received a set of crystal glasses.

looking at are alternatives to out-of-school suspension where students may not be properly supervised. And, the school system loses its average daily attendance funds.

"I want to commend this staff and teachers. They have been supportive to change in whatever I've asked and I'm appreciative of that fact," Moore commended Tuesday morning shortly before a meeting with teachers about teacher/community surveys about opinions Nicholas County Elementary School.

"If you don't want to know something, don't ask me!"

Saturday School has also been approved by site based council as of last Wednesday's regular meeting. Parents will transport their child to school at 7 a.m. and pick them up at noon. It is hoped that this inconvenience to parents spurs parents to stress proper school behavior.

Saturday School may begin after Christmas.

The longtime educator said he knew not everyone would take kindly to his views on discipline. "I'll be fair, firm, and consistent. I don't care who's involved," he assured.

Furthermore, his policy is sincerity. "If you don't want to know something, don't ask me!" he smiles.

Finally, if in-school suspension and Saturday School aren't effective behavior motivators, alternative school is being set up at the National Guard Armory.

Moore said none of the suspensions ideally appeal to him. They're just necessary. I'd rather not have a student in in-school suspension, alternative school suspension or Saturday School. But it's my goal to have none of that - but for those who can't follow rules, this is the most of what we can do to get their attention."

It isn't fair for the behaving students to be disrupted by the very few improperly behaving, he added.

Incentives

If suspensions aren't motivating students for correct behavior, Moore's hoping his Triple A program will work. Triple A stands for Attitude, Attendance and Achievement.

"Not everybody's a straight A student. But if they've got good attendance we'll reward those kids, too. We'll do something special for them. Everybody likes a pat on the back for doing well," Moore contends.

Conclusion

"If we don't have structure and control in our building, you're not going to teach students anything anyway."

More of the same.

Room for improvement.

Test scores from students at Nicholas County Elementary are staying in the range they have for the past several years, revealed Principal Marvin Moore.

Results of the Kentucky Instructional Results Information System (KIRIS) test were released to schools throughout the state last week.

"They've made some growth. We aren't the lowest but there's a long way to go," said at the Tuesday morning as he discussed results and graphs of
