AN OPEN LETTER To MOTHERS.

WE ARE ASSERTING IN THE COURTS OUR RIGHT TO THE EXCLUSIVE USE OF THE WORD "CASTORIA," AND "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," AS OUR TRADE MARK.

I, DR. SAMUEL PITCHER, of Hyannis, Massachusetts, was the originator of "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," the same that has borne and does now bear the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on every wrapper. This is the original "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," which has been used in the homes of the Mothers of America for over thirty years. LOOK CAREFULLY at the wrapper and see that it is the kind you have always bought, and has the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the wrapper. No one has authority from me to use my name except The Centaur Company of which Chas. H. Fletcher is President.

Do Not Be Deceived.

Do not endanger the life of your child by accepting a cheap substitute which some druggist may offer you (because he makes a few more pennies on it), the ingredients of which even he does not know.

The three year old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lynn Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros. of that place; and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He had all these to choose from, and skilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of croup. PREHISTORIC BONES.

Relics of a Departed Age Discovered in the Earth at Blue Licks.

Huge Teeth, Jawbones and the Evidences of the Existence of Mastodons.

(Special to Louisville Dispatch.)

Carlisle, Ky., Nov. 1.—Yesterday being a typical autumn day your correspondent concluded it would be the proper thing to drive over to the celebrated Blue Lick Springs and refresh himself with the delightful water from that historic fount, and renew his acquaintance with the famous battle ground and its surroundings. Crossing the Licking River within a few feet of where the impetuous red headed Irishman, McGary, dashed into the stream with the cry of "All who are not cowards follow me," I was soon upon the grounds where the last consultation was held before the fatal advance. It takes a dreamer to fully appreciate the story of the battle of Blue Licks. It was nothing to be compared to the battles of our day, and the one who reads of it and permits his mind to measure its order and conduct by the battles of this age is sure to fail to appreciate the story.

An army of only about 180—and nearly one half officers of some kind—partly on horseback and afoot, armed with old flintlock rifles, tomahawks and scalping knives, undrilled and undisciplined, wild for a fight, and with no idea of doing anything but just kill Indians until they grew tired of the fun, they start up the ridge, as bare of vegetation as a man's hand, and fall into an ambuscade that had been laid for them by the wily Simon Girty, assisted by British officers, who directed the raid. The ridge is now covered with small trees, but then it had been tramped bare by the animals that came there to lick for salt, and who, like a number of participants in the battle, left their bones to enrich the earth and puzzle the people of future ages.

I could tell the whole story of this disastrous fight. I could tell how the little army was divided into three lines—one under the command of Trigg, one under Todd and one under Boone, and an advance guard under command of three majors and a captain or two ...

The C—'s Dying Wail.

[From its issue of Nov. 4th.]

The issue as it was made, and has been fought out, was clear and explicit. No effort was wanting to maintain it. Nobody could by any possibility be mistaken about it. We may regret the verdict against us, but we accept it. We shall make no further effort to direct the party course or counsels, or to share in any of the responsibilities of party leadership, having done our best, according to our conscience and belief, to divert our political associates from a policy and procedure, the end of which no man can now foresee, the results of which we very much fear, both as to the welfare of the country and the party. But we are Democrats, not Republicans, and, nailing our flag to the masthead of Honest Money, Free Trade and Home Rule, we shall in the character of a private soldier in the ranks contribute whatever we are able to the ascertainment and the vindication of Truth.

For the gentlemen who have by their victory confirmed their leadership, we entertain not the least ill will. All honors belonging to that leadership are theirs; and, let us add, all the responsibilities. If they lose them, they, in turn, will have to pay the penalties of defeat. Where we can, we shall support them. Where we can not support them, we shall enter no factious opposition to them. We go to political annihilation with perfect composure—without a single resentment, or regret—having fought out to the bitter end a profound conviction in perfect fairness and good faith.

"THE worst cold I ever had in my life was cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes W. H. Norton, of Sutter Creek, Cal. "This cold left me with a cough and I was expectorating all the time. The Remedy cured me, and I want all of my friends, when troubled with a cough or cold to use it, for it will do them good." Sold by S. P. Baird.

He Was a Prophet.

Anna Gould's Changed Appearance.

[New York World.]

On the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne in Paris, there is being slowly built a splendid palace, which is to be the abode of the Count and Countess de Castellane. Strikes have been frequent among the workmen, and there have been intervals when no work has been done at all. The Parisians when they see this shrug their shoulders and remark:

"She has refused Boni the money again."

Americans who saw the count and countess last Summer at Dieppe confirm the stories of the wonderful change in the appearance of Anna Gould. She has changed from a brunette to a decided blonde, and during the transition her complexion assumed a bluish, almost mauve tint, that the heaviest white veils could not conceal.

She always wore white gowns, and this was at Dieppe—the count arrayed himself to be in accord with his wife. His favorite attire was a suit of white duck with a white silk shirt and a tiny straw hat. Around his waist he wore a belt of turquoise blue silk, a turquoise blue silk tie and blue silk hose to match, while the hat had around it a band of turquoise, also. This was the inevitable costume for the plage and afternoon drive, and with the pink complexion and blonde curls of the wearer, the effect was indescribable.

The countess always wore the same colors as her husband with her white ...

He will have the appointment of all department heads, except the comptroller. ...

THE POTATO CROP.

According to the American Agriculturist, the present potato crop in the United States, though not exactly a failure, is decidedly the smallest crop which has been produced in the country since 1892.

As compared with the total yield of potatoes for the past year the present American crop shows a falling off of nearly 30 per cent. ...

Feeding Well.

With all stock on the farm it is an important item to keep in a good, thrifty condition. Whether kept for growth, to work, for milk, butter or wool, if the most is to be made out of them good thrift is essential.

One of the most important items in maintaining thrift is to feed well. But feeding well implies more than filling the mangers and feed boxes with something to eat.

The ration supplied must be sound, wholesome and nutritious, be supplied in variety sufficient to maintain a good appetite, and would be well adapted for that which it is intended. In many cases a considerable loss is occasioned by feeding an improper ration. A milk cow that is expected to do her best in producing milk can hardly do this if fed a full ration of fattening foods. ... Many farmers fail to understand the full economy of this.
