INGENIOUS IDEAS

Anger Management: An E-Mail Prescription

(NAPS)—Ever know someone to send an e-mail that contained offensive language? Perhaps you fired off a message to your boss, friend or significant other in a moment of anger. Unfortunately, people often forget that e-mail has an indefinite life and such missives could come back to haunt them.

Angry, rude or offensive e-mail is often called "flaming," and tends to be a hot button that leads to trouble. The best-case result might be a bit of embarrassment, while the worst case could be loss of a friendship, divorce or unemployment.

David Kaufer, chairman of the English department of Carnegie Mellon University, defines flaming as "language that is intended to offend other individuals." Research shows that people tend to use more aggressive language in e-mail than in other forms of communication. As Kaufer puts it, "Sometimes people send e-mail, forgetting that there's a human on the other end."

Distinguishing a flame from an unintentional lapse in courtesy can be tricky. Part of the difficulty with flaming is the lack of shared context, which makes the speaker's intent less clear than in a face-to-face exchange. Several situations can result in e-mail flaming: intentional use of harsh language; the speaker edited the e-mail, but overlooked a stranded island of anger; or, the offensive language may be completely unintentional.

Fortunately, it's now possible to protect yourself from the perils of e-rudeness. One way is to use an e-mail program that has a built-in "flame retardant." For example, QUALCOMM's Eudora 5.0 e-mail program can gauge the flame factor of all messages with a feature called MoodWatch.

MoodWatch identifies and tags incoming and outgoing messages with one, two or three chili peppers to indicate the level of harshness in the language. The program can't prevent you from sending a flaming e-mail, but you'll have the opportunity to make an informed choice before sending a message that may cause you headaches in the future.

To learn more, visit the Web site at www.eudora.com.

A hot idea in communication is making e-mail users aware of "flaming" messages.

Hunt, Tincher, Fryman hit double-digits, 'Jackets fall to Lawrence Co.

NCHS edged by 2 vs. Fleming

By DENVER BROWN
Sports Editor

After ripping Menifee County in last week's opener in the McDonald's Holiday Classic in Owingsville, the Nicholas County Blue Jackets basketball team stayed at the heels of the Lawrence County Bulldogs, but fell 76-66 in the tournament's second round last Thursday. The 'Jackets also lost a barn-burner to Fleming County Tuesday night, 63-61.

Senior Forrest Hunt (22) and junior B.J. Tincher (12) led the way on offense for Head Coach Bobby Storie's Jackets (3-7) in their battle with the Bulldogs.

Lawrence County (6-5) owned leads of 18-15 and 35-27 after the first and second quarters, but the 'Jackets played just about even with the 'Dogs in the second half.'

Josh Fryman added a dozen points in the loss. Stuart Baird finished with five points, Jay Grant and Seth Saunders each had four and Darrin Herrington put in three.

The 'Jackets held an eight-point lead over Fleming County (3-7) after Tuesday night's opening period and held a 32-24 margin at halftime. But the Panthers evened things up after the third and held on for a one-bucket win in the fourth.

Saunders had a team-best 16 points and Tincher and Fryman each scored 15. Hunt and Grant combined for another dozen and Baird finished with three.

Storie's club battles Augusta in Bracken County Friday night. The junior varsity plays at 6 p.m. and the varsity follows at 7:30 p.m. The 'Jacket teams host Bourbon County Saturday night.

Jay Grant and Jacob Broderick pressure the Menifee County ball handler to lose it out of bounds in last week's 73-57 win by head coach Bobby Storie's club. Nicholas County lost a nail-biter to Fleming County Tuesday night of this week.
