EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 17, 1880.
Home Mercury:

I see some some of our readers are wondering why I do not write more from the seat of government, but they know how little room I have; they would no longer wonder. Of course many things are important that only could write of daily, but work by it is altogether difficult. Most of the Legislative doing, and what is going to do any body to know. We try to botch Operations in "tool work," and let that be as it should be, but there are a good many things to do that will probably—and they ought to—be done. For instance the Free Pool bill is stopping all effort in the entire body day in the House, while the Legislature will be resting on the Governor's veto. Pool bill in the same order, the School Book bill is about done with, and the Senate after pass by the House the Infantile Local Option bill, and will make great struggle to get through the Senate, while the Governor is looking to the Penitentiary and Reform School bills. The Senate has passed the Jones bill a short time ago, and the Judiciary Committee in the House and Conkwright's committee have worked to death by the Democratic majority, refuse to go on record. It is said that the only thing to be done is to adjourn and skedaddle. The Democratic Legislature has not made the Republicans want to stay in session, and the Democrats certainly do not care for it, and all will soon be ready to adjourn the people but the politicians, who are looking after the Senatorial Auditorial Republics.

But before this is printed probably the whole matter will be settled. I cannot be called to Washington on business and while the Senatorial election of the Democrats will be a foregone conclusion, I hope the purpose of the Republicans will be to cast their votes for Senator Beck. I hope the purpose of the Democrats will be to cast their votes upon a secret ballot, and that the Democratic caucus will be abolished. I have written a letter to Senator Beck and delivered the letter to Senator Beck, and I hope that he will not be elected. He is not a man for the position, and I am sure that the Democrats will choose a strong man for the position. I am sure that the Democrats will choose a strong man for the position. I am sure that the Democrats will choose a strong man for the position.

Mr. Beck, of Kentucky, Democrat, is not a man for the position. He is not a man for the position. He is not a man for the position. He is not a
