THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

How the Brigadier Held the King's Pass.

CHAPTER X

I believe that the last news that I told you my friends was about how I received at the bidding of the emperor the sword of honor which is the prize that may be allowed to the bravest man in the army. I have the scar of my cut on you now on the elbow, for the sword I hung in a leathern pouch at home, and I used it only on the days of battle. It was a beautiful weapon, with a gold hilt of the most elegant description, and I was very proud indeed when I found myself the owner of it. But I am not here to brag about my own deeds, but to tell you of the doings of Etienne Gerard, for he lays high claim to be considered the most famous soldier in all the French army.

I will take you, I said he, to very early days in my career, when I was but a very young lad, for it was in my way to be early to the front. It was in the year 1806, when I was a few days over sixteen, that I got my first step in the army. I had been a volunteer before that, but I had never had the chance of showing what I could do. Then there came a day when I found a battalion of the Old Guard in front of me, and I was ordered to lead my men to the attack. The bullets were flying so thick that the very leaves seemed to fall from the trees, and I knew that many of my men were falling behind me, though I dared not look round to see. Then I saw the colonel of the regiment, who was a very gallant man, turn his horse's head and canter back to the rear. I thought that he was going to lead us on foot, so I turned my own horse's head and followed him. I was but a few paces behind him when I found that he was not retreating at all, but that he had been wounded in the leg, and was trying to get back to the surgeons. I was about to turn my horse round once more, when I saw that the whole regiment was coming after me, and that I was left alone in front of the enemy. Of course I could not run away when all the others were marching slowly, so I rode back with the regiment, and found myself in the midst of a cloud of skirmishers, who were firing at us from behind every bush and tree. Well, we had been rolling and rocking in this way for some time, when I found that my horse had been hit, and was limping badly with one of his forelegs. I was very fond of the horse, and as we reached the edge of a wood I sprang down from his back, and led him into the shelter of the trees, thinking that I could bind up his wound. I had hardly got there when I found myself surrounded by a dozen of the Prussian sharpshooters, who had been pressing on through the wood in front of the regiment. They were all round me in a moment, and I saw that my only chance was to surrender. "IT IS I WHO CAN HELP YOU."

The old priest observed, however, that he did not think a French officer would be detected by that, and if I had any desire to escape I of course have been decided by his report.

Such a desire! How was I to get out of the country? I was dressed in the uniform of a hussar, and I had my pistols and my sword, and, looking up I saw a great forest which brings a gray point into the sky. Yet with it all I was determined to escape, and I was determined that I would reach the army again, was an excellent soldier, but still even among the best there are degrees of merit.

Ah, that happy July day of which I speak! Never in all my life have I seen and stood in the golden Spanish sunshine. It was but the evening before that I had heard from the regiment. They were at Pastrana on the other side of the mountains, and I knew that the English—not forty miles from me by road. But how was I to get to them? The same thread which had proved my noble lady's undoing, and which had brought me to the ground and from an old priest, who lived in a little house by himself in the valley. He was a Spaniard of the old school, and he had been a clergyman of distinction who had busied himself in our politics, taking advantage of the opportunity to pay his debts to the Church. He was a very learned man, and I gave it upon my honor that I grew my mustache the old Marshal Ney's own pattern, before I left him. With that he gave me a razor, and I shaved off the mustache in which we found a resemblance to the Marshal, and which I had cultivated with such care. Then I put on the brown suit of our more remote villagers, and I found myself a changed man. I was now strong enough to walk, and I was determined to start that very night. The night of July 28th, and sparkled high gave promise of a fine day. My horse was then bandaged and fourth hostess was ready to start. I had a good deal of money, which the priest thought that I might need, and he had also got his self-appointed task. I was to go off and get out of sight of the house, and then he would join me with some of his flock, who would bring my horse. I was to go off and get out of sight of the house, and then he would join me with some of his flock, who would bring my horse. But even as I was here out came the first stones and realized that there was no time to lose. I was soon on my feet with my fur on perhaps and then pulled out my head in the straggling grass in the corner of the yard, and it was with my wonderful joy that I saw that the Spaniards had left my horse in front of his own stable door, and that the thin blade passed between the bars of the window. I was in a moment at what I was dragged from the house, and I was soon on my horse's back and galloping down the road. The peasants were under the bastion cotton, and they cheered me as I passed them.

Scrofula, a Vile Inheritance.

Scrofula is the most obstinate of blood troubles, and as often the result of an inherited taint in the blood. S. S. S. is the only remedy which goes deep enough to reach scrofula, it forces out every trace of the disease, and cures the worst cases.

My son, Clarin, was afflicted from infancy with scrofula. The sores and other symptoms were a serious trouble to him for three years. His physician said that some of them would be permanent. Several remedies were tried without benefit, when we were induced to give S. S. S. a trial. The effect was wonderful, and before he had taken a dozen bottles he was entirely cured. He is now a fine, healthy boy, and has remained so perfectly since. J. M. SMITH, Atlanta, Ga.

For real blood trouble it is a waste of time to experiment with any but S. S. S. Blood diseases are beyond their skill. Swift's Specific

And besides me I was at this horrible affair, and the maddening pace which we were going at, and the fact that I had had no food for a day, had now some little tendency to shorten the range of my vision. I was not aware of the fact that I had been hit in the head, and that I had been stunned by the blow, and that I had been left behind by the rest of the party. ENEMIES OF STREET CARS.

The Smaller Species of Dogs and the Bicycle Riders Are Chief.

The arch enemies of the street car are the fast wagons and the ice wagons, but the dog and the bicycle rider are the chief foes of the motorman. Between the two the motorman has a hard time of it. Every day he runs over a dog or two and kills it, or else he runs over a bicycle rider and knocks him down. Sometimes he runs over a dog and kills it, and then the bicycle rider runs over him and knocks him down. Then the motorman has to stop his car and help the bicycle rider up, and he has to help him up, and he has to help him up, and he has to help him up.

Prosperous Colored People.

It is not often that a farmer of the section of country is able to dispose of $2,000 worth of cattle at one sale, but when this is done by our brother of African extraction it is worthy of particular mention. Such a sale was made by Sir George Struthers, a prosperous North Fork (colored) farmer, on his farm on adjoining county of Bourbon.

The gentlemen own an fine grass farm of about 200 acres, and has been a successful stock raiser for years, and has succeeded in amassing quite a fund. His children are all grown and have their racial capacity would rank among the leading people. It is their boast, however, that they are children of a white mother and are therefore related to some of the best citizens of this and other counties. Colored Citizen.

I was seriously afflicted with a cough that nearly took my life. I had a severe sore cough that year before. I tried all kinds of cough medicine, but got no relief, and being recommended to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, I did so, and got relief from the first dose. I used the second bottle and the second bottle and the second bottle and I was entirely cured. I have used it on several occasions since, and it has never failed to relieve me. I have also used it in my family with the best results. I have also used it in my family with the best results. I have also used it in my family with the best results.

MY GOOD TIME IN CAMP.

The following remarkable effusion was handed in by a member of the 1st Ky. Regt. Those glorious days of camp life are fast fading into memory, and we are glad to see that some of the boys are trying to keep them fresh in their minds. The writer is a member of Co. B, and is a son of Mr. Jas. Williamson, of Nicholas county. He is a bright young man, and we hope to hear from him often:

AN ADDRESS

BY THE FISCAL COURT.

To the Tax-payers of Nicholas County:

At the regular April Term, 1898, the Fiscal Court of Nicholas county, Ky., made an order directing the assessment of the property in the voters of the county at its true cash value, for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not that were in favor of the issue of bonds to raise money to purchase and maintain Turnpikes in said county, and if not carried, within that time, what is actually necessary to be done to put the turnpikes in a good condition, and to make the roads, and put the free turnpike system in successful operation. Bonds bearing 6 per cent interest can readily be sold at par. They cannot be issued for more than thirty years, and may be redeemed at the pleasure of the County, at any time after five years from their date. They will be delivered and matured as the roads cannot exceed 25 cents on the $100 valuation.

If the bonds are voted there will be no more tolls collected on the turnpikes in this county, and there will be no more toll-gates. Every man will be required to work on the road in his district, or pay a commutation tax of $2 per annum. The money arising from the commutation tax will be used in the district in which it is collected, and will be expended by the supervisor of the district.

If the bonds are not voted, and the roads continue to be operated as they are now, the county will be required to raise annually by taxation a sum sufficient to pay the interest on the bonded debt, and the cost of collecting the tolls, and in order to put a check to a system of lawlessness, endangering the lives and property of citizens and disturbing the peace and order of the county, the tolls will be collected by the Sheriff, and the money will be paid into the County Treasury.

The Fiscal Court has made no order as to the time when the election shall be held, but it is believed that it will be held at the regular November election, 1898, the question will be submitted to the voters of the county at the regular November election, 1898, and the money will be paid into the County Treasury.

A WONDERFUL SIGHT.

On Friday, June 3rd, at about noon time, the morning on the wards on the East side of Court. Sanders' residence on the M. & L. pike. I was reading a book at the time, but suddenly became conscious that something very unusual was transpiring near me. I raised my eyes and behold the most wonderful and beautiful sight that I ever saw in the whole life of nearly 78 years. The wonder was a large and unbecomingly large flock of chickens, about 40 degrees, also at an angle of about 45 degrees. The sun was at the meridian, and the chickens appeared to come directly from the direction of that great luminary, which is moving in a Northerly direction.

The day was perfectly clear, and the sun was shining brightly, but for the few seconds the light was visible it appeared to be in a perfect mist.

It is beyond my power to fully describe the brilliancy and beauty of this wonderful light. — L. F. Anderson.

Mr. F. Eatchel, of The City Cafe, says: "During my brother's late sickness with typhoid fever I gave him Chamberlain's Pain Balm was the only remedy that gave him any relief." Mr. Eatchel has handled the remedy for years and can vouch for its merits. For sale by druggists. 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

For Dehorning Cattle.

In a recent bulletin of the New Hampshire College Agricultural Experiment Station caustic potash applied within the first week after the birth of a calf is advocated for the prevention of horns.

The hair should be cut away from the young animal's head and the caustic potash rubbed on the parts. Care must be taken to protect the eyes with vaseline. The application should be repeated from time to time as necessary to prevent the growth of the horn. The operation is said to be painless and easily performed.

Important Suits Brought.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 6.—Suits in behalf of the State and county for back taxes upon franchises for all the years since the Revenue Law was declared unconstitutional by the City of Lexington and the Secretary of State, and by the Commonwealth against corporations aggregating $20,000,000. The suits are the outgrowth of the recent decision of the Court of Appeals under the statutory provision for the recovery of delinquent taxes. The city has also begun suits, which would increase the assessed amount $20,000,000.

Special Navy Supplement.

The subject of our Navy is one which should receive the careful attention of every intelligent American to keep it in a condition of efficiency. The Special Navy Supplement of the Louisville Weekly Courier-Journal has been made to explain what the Navy is. Comparisons have been drawn to show just where the various types of vessels are between different navies, as well as those who command the decks. There is much to gain by reading this, for surely, not only by debating them, for surely, not by meeting them free of bill but by expensive litigation and unlawful methods, but by honest, fair dealing. The showing differences between those who have and those who have not, is one of this kind copy. It is beautiful. It is wonderful. It is a revelation. It is wonderful. It is a revelation. It is wonderful. It is a revelation. It is wonderful. It is a revelation.

HIRED WEBSTER FOR A WEEK.

Of course, Webster was in demand by those who would afford to pay for his services. A story Nathaniel once told of how he got the better of the great debater, Hayne, is worth repeating. It was very, however. He had a small case which was to be tried at Salem, and he went to Jaffrey, and he posted to Webster's office in great haste. It was a case with a neighbor over a matter of considerable local interest, and his pride as a litigant was at stake. He told Webster the particulars, and asked what he would charge to conduct the case.

"Why," said Webster, "you can't afford to pay me. I should have to stay down there like a fool a week, and my fee would be more than the case is worth. I couldn't go down there for less than $1,000. I could be sent for in case the docket as well as one, and I wouldn't cost any more, for one case would take my time for the entire week, anyway."

"All right, Mr. Webster," quickly responded the Nantucketer. "Here's your $1,000. You come down, and I'll fix it so you can try every case."

Webster was astonished over this proposition that he kept his word. He spent the entire week in Salem, and he appeared on one side or the other in every case that came up for hearing. The shrewd Nantucketer had planned out to all his friends who were in litigation, and succeeded in more than $1,500, so that he got Webster's services for a week, and made a good profit by the bout.

The last man was alive in those days of trade and speculation, he would probably have had a good deal, although nothing like the services of all the big lawyers of the entire country.

Suffered 37 Years with Kidney Disease.

Mr. G. A. Sullivan, a merchant at Fayetteville, Ga., writes August 16, 1897: "Foley's Kidney Cure is meeting with wonderful success. It has relieved cases of long standing and considered incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. For 37 years I suffered with kidney disease, and for the last five years I was in bed much of the time. I had several physicians prescribe for me, but got no relief. I had not been able to work for two years when I did one year ago. I was chosen delegate to the Democratic State convention. — M. F. Return of Spanish Soldiers.

(From a Chicago Paper.)

The Spanish soldier is a frugal liver, but his accompanied allowance being two cents per day, he is not able to save much. In some cases soldiers and navy are served out early in the morning, at noon and a half of bread per man per day constitutes the government ration. This is quite little meat, and hence is often a bad condition on a shock of dry black beans and about a little oil and a dime per day.

CASTORIA

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky will meet in regular session on September 20, without there is some unforeseen cause for an earlier session. The Third Appellate District will probably be decided during the recess, as the docket is now cleared. Among those are included the Prince and Commonwealth case, the Third Appellate case and the Covington Council case.
