THE WOMAN'S BIBLE.

Barred from the Library of the Nation Club, of Topeka, Kas.

Committee, After Due Consideration, Decides That the Book Is Not Worthy a Place Among Its Choice Books.

The Nation club of Topeka, Kas., composed entirely of women and ex-ladies, principally in abouncing the literary work of the club for the year, has barred the Bible from the library, has ordered that no longer give space on the book shelves to the Woman's Bible. This decision was reached by the committee on literature, which has been considering the question, prepared its report and submitted it to the club. The committee in this report says that the Bible has been revised and the time, and it is likely some more revisions will have been taken, but for a woman's bible, she thinks, the revising has not been done well enough, as the work executed in getting up the book which puts the Bible in the hands of women.

The resolutions adopted by the club in reporting the work of the committee and which will be read from the platform of the Kansas club by special request. In all the revisions of the Bible which have been made there has been no attempt to make it fit for the use of women. The book should not be amended to be put in the hands of women, but should be revised from start to finish. The committee that made the Bible was composed entirely of men, and the book has been left as they left it, and it is the duty of women to either throw away the Bible or revise it for their own use.

The King Bible, adopted by the Roman church prior to the ninth century, is the only Bible that has ever been revised by women. The Bible as it now stands is the most infamous book ever published, and women should be ashamed to have it in their homes. Much credit is due to the Woman's Bible for its work in the past.

WOULD DIE LIKE PETRONIUS.

Georgia Preacher Imitates the Roman in the Book of "Quo Vadis" with Variations.

The death scene of Petronius in the book of "Quo Vadis" was duplicated in the town by Rev. A. G. Dunn, of Hawkinsville, Ga., on the 4th inst., when Dunn was a member of the Methodist conference, which has been in session in Savannah for the past week. Dunn, who is a young preacher, has been stationed at Hawkinsville for the past year, and has become a favorite with the people of that town. He was taken sick with typhoid fever, and his condition became so serious that his physician gave him up to die. Dunn, who is a man of fine literary attainments, was a great admirer of Sienkiewicz's book, and when he realized that he was going to die he decided to imitate Petronius in his death. He had a warm bath prepared, and, getting into the water, he had his wrists cut, and bled to death. He was conscious to the last, and died with a smile on his face.
