The Young Man and the Sofa.

The manufacturer of C. W. Ray's has the prospect that now confronts the young man who is about to marry and the factory of young men who are about to be fitted by the agency of the new Century and at the beginning of a period of revolution. Another period of prosperity. That the young man is called upon to go into it is the opinion of the writer of the present article, and he is also having made on the subject of the present and future. Upon reflection upon the genius of the age, a nature of the society, and the spirit of the times, he has come to the conclusion that the young man who is about to marry should buy a sofa. He should have more than one, but one he must have. Without a sofa he is not in the swim. He is not up to date. He is not in touch with the spirit and aspiration of the age. He is not in touch with the spirit and aspiration of the age. He is not in touch with the spirit and aspiration of the age.

THE COMING OF SANTA CLAUS.

'Tis the week before Christmas, the stores are a sight,
And the toys and the children are filled with delight.
For rumors are flying from far and from near
That dear old Kris Kringle will shortly be here.

Oh, would you believe it—he's now in Carlisle!
His jolly round countenance wreathed in smile after smile;
While out of his eyes great big twinkles of fun
A self satisfaction over a toil he has done.

For weeks he has worn a mysterious air
And pa loved his gifts with unusual care,
And bundles and bundles were carried home
At Santa's headquarters—Carlisle's City Store.

Small jobbers and traders for the grist and the street,
That make our fair women their purses and purse.
Each for a discount that's strong and warm,
And hose, in shelter when blowing from the storm.

Such fuss for the children as Santa has brought,
To all sorts we sell, and to each we thought.
To suit as a kitten, in colors, and white,
And never an old thing was sold with delight!

The windows are teeming with beautiful things
That old Santa Claus has brought with his sleigh.
The finest exhibit Carlisle ever saw
Is that of Stone headquarters with Chevrolet Waugh.

The last-the-hand wonders for women and men,
Absorbing attraction have been for years!
Just see them parade every day and all night
In front of the store at the old City Store.

And each table linens—the town will go wild
To see with what bargains the counters are piled.
As fast as you can, you'll find them all gone
Unless you have bought yourself ahead of the run.

Such napkins and towels of damask so fair,
And such fine things in members' quilts can be had
Bargains of the newest and prettiest kind.
A pleasure for Christmas to anyone's mind.

Those elderdown pillows all piled in a heap
Will be soft to the wool of the Angora sheep,
Delicious scents they acutely suggest,
And prove to the weary a haven of rest.

And then the umbrellas are fitting in style
To cover the head of the belle of Carlisle.
Dress goods for Christmas extraordinarily made,
They'll surely pass muster when out on parade.

And all luxury sweetness for the love in Carlisle.
Those robes for your hogskins will just make you smile
The prettiest, smallest ever you saw
Are housed in the minutiæ of Chappell & Waugh.

A rainy day skirt she will want to wear too,
Or perhaps a smoke or a blue,
Such styles "up to date" the attention will draw—
The town says it with Chappell & Waugh.

The City Cash Store is in beauty in dress,
Come see their Old Santa holds forth at his best.
The children are crowding about in store glee,
But still there is room, friends, for you and for me.

The stock in immense, with abundance for all.
With stocks to be proud of, from wash to wassail,
Polite and attentive, and anxious to please,
Are the clerks at the Cash Store, the metropolis of ease.

Old Santa is hidden away out of sight,
Enjoying it all with the utmost delight,
The part of Christmas giver he's ever to be,
To welcome each one at the old City Store.

Long, long has this festive anticipation stood
For all that is upright, prosperous and good,
And all we go on as we ever have done
Removing for pleiades from father to son.

As staunch as the men who have builded her well,
The old store shall stand unwaveringly still.
The story of principle, truth and good will,
And all of her employees gratefully fulfill.

She cries "Merry Christmas" again and again.
To her little children, and women and men,
And Santa peeps out with a jolliful grin
As he wishes you all a Merry Christmas.

'Tis the week before Christmas, hurrah and hurrah!
Old Santa is stopping with Chappell & Waugh,
And there you will find him, with presents galore,
Awaiting you all at the old City Store.
