CROWNED WITH GLORY.

A Glimpse of Polly's Art

By Leroy M. Scott.

I HAD rapped several times on the door of Polly's studio without gaining response, and was turning disappointedly away when there was a sound of movement within. I paused, the door opened, and Polly stood before me. A hideous checked apron enveloped her from chin to toes, a palette was over her left thumb, and a brush was in her teeth. On the tip of her nose there was a patch of green paint, and at this I smiled before I said a word.

She took this smile as a challenge. "Well, what are you grinning at?" she demanded. I knew at once that Polly was having an "off" day.

"At your nose," I answered, cheerfully.

"At my nose!" She took the brush out of her mouth and stared indignantly at me.

"Yes, it's green—a beautiful emerald green."

"Is that all!" Polly quickly rubbed her right sleeve across her face, thereby transforming the splotch to a green smear that extended from nose-tip to right ear. "What do I care for a little paint! But I suppose you want to come in?"

"That's what I came up for."

"I guess you'll have to, then. But do you see that sign?" She indicated with her brush the card on the door which bore the statement: "Unless on business, call after five."

...

She took her place in front of the easel, and, putting up her lorgnette, surveyed the painting.

"Good, don't you think?" suggested Polly.

The lorgnette came down and the lady of adiposity shook her head.

"It has some good points, yes," she admitted. "But I don't like it as a whole. It—well, it looks too common. Now, I hardly think you would say that I look common." She gazed at Polly severely through her lorgnette, and then turned her eyes back to the portrait.

"No, indeed," Polly said, with some haste. She looked at me, and I saw her lips move. "I wouldn't dare to," they said.

"When I buy a gown I buy it with the expectation that it will add something to my appearance. Why shouldn't I expect the same when I buy a picture?"

"You should," Polly agreed, giving me a look full of hopelessness.

"Just so—that's what I think. Now, don't you believe that you could—you could improve it—you could touch it up a bit in places?"

"Easily enough," said Polly. "Is there any special change you'd like to suggest?"

"I can't say I like the chin. I don't like the fullness beneath it. And the wrinkles—they look bad."

"What kind of chin do I want? I suppose you carry a stock?" she asked, sarcastically.

"Anything you want." Polly picked up a pad of sketching paper, manipulated a pencil rapidly for a minute, then held up the pad in such a way that I, as well as Mrs. Wilson, could see the handiwork. The pencil had traced a rounded chin with just the least suggestion of matronly fullness beneath it.

"How'll that do?" asked Polly.

"Just what I want. That'll look far better. Now, don't you think you could do something of the kind for the nose?"

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES of LIME & SODA will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

OBITUARY.

ROBERTS.—On Friday morning Jan. 12, 1900, James D. Roberts received the summons of the dread angel of death, and went home, at the age of 25 years. About ten years ago under the preaching of C. C. Cox he united with the Baptist Church at Locust Grove, in which church he was a faithful member till his death. He was a true christian, and had the love and respect of his fellow men wherever he was known. In his manner he was courteous and kind toward all, and because of this his memory will be cherished in the hearts of those who knew him. He was devoted to his widowed mother and sister and his death is especially sad in that they are now left without the love and the care of a son and brother. The funeral services were held at Locust Grove church Jan. 13th, and were conducted by Rev. Geo. Shephard, after which his remains were laid to rest in the church yard. He will be greatly missed not only by the church which he so much loved but by the entire community in which he lived. But our loss will be heavens gain. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

What does it do?

It causes the oil glands in the skin to become more active, making the hair soft and glossy, precisely as nature intended.

It cleanses the scalp from dandruff and thus removes one of the great causes of baldness.

It makes a better circulation in the scalp and stops the hair from coming out.

It Prevents and It Cures Baldness

Ayer's Hair Vigor will surely make hair grow on bald heads, provided only there is any life remaining in the hair bulbs.

It restores color to gray or white hair. It does not do this in a moment, as will a hair dye; but in a short time the gray color of age gradually disappears and the darker color of youth takes its place.

Would you like a copy of our book on the Hair and Scalp? It is free.

Houses of Reform.

The Houses of Reform now contain 27 white and 32 colored boys and the courts are sending new recruits almost daily. The institution is in good running condition and the inmates all seem to be satisfied and willing to learn. They are very comfortably situated and Supt. Dosk is fast getting house like conditions to prevail. A visit to the institution will convince any one of its importance and necessity and of the wisdom of the trustees in adopting the plans they have, so that buildings can almost be added indefinitely as they are needed. The manual training building and the power house have been completed and double cottage for boys and a single one for girls are approaching completion, and it will require all of the $100,000 to pay for them, leaving other and very important buildings, such as the agricultural building, the administration cottage and a second cottage each for boys and girls, yet to be built. In order to build them, the trustees will ask for an additional appropriation of $100,000 by the present Legislature, which will doubtless send a committee to visit the institution and report. The importance of caring for and reforming youthful criminals can not be overestimated and there is little doubt that the Legislature will grant the additional appropriation, which will meet present needs and put Kentucky with the forefront in a matter in which she has so long lagged. To save the children from the association of hardened criminals in the penitentiary and to make useful citizens of them, the House of Reform are designed, and every cent spent for the the purpose will pay the State many, many fold.

He sells five bottles of that medicine to one of any other kind, and it gives great satisfaction. In these days of la grippe there is nothing like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to stop the cough, heal up the sore throat and lungs and give relief within a very short time.
