Editorial Correspondence.

New York, Aug. 15, 1901.

Dear Mercury:—

After spending four days and several hundred dollars in Chicago, I moved eastward to New York to see the United States Navy and the Pan-American Exposition. But, as a mistake or two things changed. A short visit on the home end and we were in the city. Electric cars, elevated railroads, subways, automobiles, vehicles of every description, and people, people, people, all going like the old boy was after them, and each one could assume that he was and that he must get there at once. Its no use for me to undertake to describe New York. It has to be seen to be appreciated. Every man and woman who can afford it should make a visit to the Metropolis. It is not cheap, but it is worth the money. It is the greatest city of the world and of its kind.

I had a most pleasant visit to Tammany Hall and I must here and now thank them for myself. I have many things to say in a city so large, but I will only say that would not look well in Carlisle, but Tammany Hall, New York has been governmental for the past year. The policemen are courteous and obliging to the public. They do not "sass" or use abusive language to any one. Each member of the police force is dressed in a neat uniform and looks like a soldier. Each one is a veteran of the late war and has been promoted for meritorious conduct. Each one is a gentleman and is polite to all. Each one is a Democrat. Through the kindness of Mr. Keller—who, of course, is a member of Tammany Hall—I had the pleasure of meeting a number of the leading Democrats of the country and of hearing many interesting speeches. I was introduced to Mr. Croker, but I was not personally called upon for the Democratic Association, but will continue to draw my salary as a member of the Association. I was also introduced to Mr. Sheehan, the junior Senator from New York, who is the large majority of the delegation from New York. And just there are the greatest fights. Democrats who have provided this war fund, and they have provided this war fund, and they are responsible for the money. They are responsible for the money that was spent, and they will see that the war upon others, but are exempt themselves. The same men who have been in the habit of paying the bonds, and those dyspeptic open those will be called upon to pay the bonds, and the suffering will be considerable in many instances. Will you be one of the well-fixed Democrats?

If the strike is prolonged it may result in a famine in coal in New York before spring as numerous cases of suffering for coal have occurred and it is not strange that most people think the workmen should return to their home before he strikes. Many of the strikers are going to their homes and others are said to be starving. Coal cannot be had, and the supply cannot be found to relieve the suffering
