The latest news from the President is that he is on the sure road to recovery. His physicians think he will surely get well.

The Western Union Telegraph Company and the Long Distance Telephone Company were prompt in furnishing bulletins in regard to the President's condition. As usual the MERCURY office was the place where all come for reliable news.

MR. E. B. HARRIS, who a few weeks since purchased a one-half interest in the Nicholas Courier has purchased the other half of Mr. Insko and is now sole owner of the plant. Mr. Harris is a good printer and newspaper man, and the business of the Courier will be pushed by him.

Not Exedient.

The Democratic State Central Committee at its meeting at Frankfort Tuesday, decided that it is inexpedient to order a State primary for the purpose of nominating a candidate for United States Senator. This almost insures the election of ex-Governor McCreary.

ACTUAL, Gen. John B. Gordon said the right thing at the right time. The President and his wife have the sympathy of the entire world, but no grief is deeper or more sincere than that in the hearts of the old soldiers of the Confederacy and their decendants throughout the South. And they know how to give expression to genuine emotion without diluting it with gush or gamon.—[Louisville Times.

THE ladies who are entitled to join the Daughters of the Confederacy are assured that their presence at the meeting next Tuesday does not pledge them to become members, but we feel sure that all who attend will become members. The dues are only 20 cents per year, and surely this can not be objected to. The benefits will be explained by Mrs. Stoner and Forsythe Tuesday. The ladies out in the country are especially invited.

The Anarchists.

The attempted assassination of President McKinley has awakened great interest in the matter of Anarchy and the treatment of those who believe in it, and it is fast dawning upon the leaders of thought that some radical steps must be taken in the management of the disciples of annihilation and our opinion is that annihilation of all who believe in it is the best mode that can be adopted. There is no room in this country for anarchy, and the sooner those who believe in government and order make up their minds to resort to stern methods, the better it will be. It will be well to put a stop to the teaching of anarchy and annihilation.

The Street Fair.

OUR neighbor, Carlisle, is to have a Street Fair sometime in October. The merchants of that place will find a celebration of this kind given once a year will not be a draw back to the town, but in the long run will benefit all alike. Men in business in small towns are not, as a rule, blessed with more than they need, but if a town will put forth attractions to draw visitors they can have more money to circulate among themselves, for each visitor spends considerable money, and no matter who takes it in on the "big day," the other fellows will get to handle it before long. S. W. Keller, of the MERCURY, has charge of the affair, and we know it will be a success.—[Paris Democrat.

Our merchants are not only interested in the day the Fair is held, but in all the days to come. Our neighboring cities are making strong efforts to draw away from us our natural customers, and we must not permit it. If we offer no inducements for people to come to Carlisle they will naturally drift to those cities that invite and tempt them. What say the Carlisle Merchants?

HOWARD AND POWERS CLASH.—The Courier-Journal says: "A dispute over the division of money raised in the mountain counties to aid in their defense caused Jim Howard, to attack Caleb Powers in the Frankfort jail Wednesday evening. Powers was knocked senseless with a heavy ink bottle. Powers is in a serious condition with a gash four inches long across his forehead and the temple artery severed. The only witness was J. K. Dixon, who separated the fued. Howard claims Powers cursed him and assumed a threatening attitude. Powers denies this and claims the attack was unprovoked."

James Andrew Scott, of Frankfort, has accepted employment to appear in defense of James Howard when his trial is called in the Franklin Circuit Court Tuesday. Associated with him will be Thomas B. Gordon, of Louisville, and James A. Violett, of Frankfort.

Judge Cantrill.

A dispatch from Frankfort, Sept. 9th says: Judge Cantrill's statement in his instructions to the grand jury this afternoon that "If any prayers went up to the Throne of Grace after Goebel was shot, they were secret prayers, not that he might live, but that his life might not be spared," has caused a profound sensation here.

"We meet," said Judge Cantrill, "under lamentable circumstances. Crime has run rampant not only in Kentucky, but throughout the nation, and to-day the hearts of the whole people are rent with grief, and prayers are going up all over the land for our stricken President. It is sad to contemplate such a state of affairs, and it has always been my wish that the country be relieved of such conditions. As to all of the causes that make such crimes possible and probable I can form no conception, but I believe that the dereliction of grand and petit juries is to blame more than all other causes combined. When the grand jurors are assembled together in their room, shut off and protected from all outside influences, alone with their God, then there is not the slightest excuse for any dereliction of duty.

"The people are at present bowed down with an unspeakable grief. The head of the nation has been ruthlessly shot down. No fair minded man of any kind of political faith can but condemn the foul assassination and wish that the day shall speedily come when such crimes shall be impossible.

"It has not been two years since this grand old commonwealth was shaken from center to circumference by a similar crime. On your capitol square, in open daylight, one of the leading citizens was shot down in a similar manner to the attempted assassination of the President. It is a deplorable and humiliating fact that we have to admit that there were certain elements in Kentucky that, if they did not openly approve that awful crime, were at least willing to excuse and even to shield the criminal.

"At that time there were no public meetings by the people who now propose to denounce anarchy. The pulpits as a rule (I am speaking advisedly) sent up no prayers to the throne of grace that William Goebel might live. The churches now busy fulminating their thunderbolt at anarchy sent up no prayers, and if there were any prayers they were those made in silence and in secret that the life of William Goebel might not be spared, but the man with whom he was contesting might succeed him.

"There was a portion of your public press which winked at, if they did not approve and encourage, the assassination, and after the crime was committed they boasted openly that no one could find the assassin of William Goebel.

"There was little condemnation of the crime throught the State," said the court continuing. "I am determined that the people of this State shall not forget that the same people who are now fulminating their thunderbolts against anarchy were the exponents of so-called civil liberty, who were the encouragers and apologists for the crime.

Committee Meeting.

At a meeting of the Democratic Committee Monday, Sept. 9th, to select a list of eight Democrats from each voting precinct from which the election commissioners appoint the Democratic election officers for the ensuing year, the following committeemen were in attendance: R. T. Ritchie, Abner Henry, Jas Arthur, John Harvey, Elmore Throckmorton, Jno. Moran, Geo. Reed and F. B. Henry.

After the selection of the list and before adjourning, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Since the Democratic committee for the 30th State Senatorial district at a meeting held in Cynthiana, May 27th, 1901, authorized the holding of a primary election for the nomination of a Democratic candidate for State Senator, and the selection to be left to the Democrats of Robertson county and under the direction and supervision of the Robertson county committee, and at a joint meeting of the Robertson county and Nicholas county committees at Lower Blue Licks, June 5th, agreeing to leave the nomination of a candidate for Representative to the Democrats of Robertson county, and under control of the Robertson county Committee also, and whereas the said election was held on August 3rd, 1901, and a candidate for State Senator and for Representative were declared nominated by the said committee, namely: the Hon E. Kenton for State Senator and T. V. Chandler for Representative, therefore be it

Resolved, That we endorse and accept these nominations as our standard bearers of the party for the offices to which they aspire and pledge them our hearty support, and earnestly appeal to all good Democrats to put forth their best efforts to secure their election if from no other motive than the election of a Democratic United States Senator at the next coming session of the General Assembly of Ky.

It is further ordered that these proceedings be furnished the different Democratic papers in this, Harrison and Robertson counties.

Letter from W. H. Cole.

OLD POINT COMFORT, Sept. 1st, 1901.
Dear Mercury:

According to promise I will write you in regard to Picturesque Old Point Comfort, Hampton Roads, Newport News, the Rip Raps, and a huddle of names as quaint as those of a fairy tale. They carry the school youth of to day back into history, and take their places in the list with Lexington, Valley Forge, Trenton and Yorktown; but to those of more mature years they revive memories of the most stirring events of those eventful and history-making years from 1861—1865.

Were a circle to be drawn upon the map enclosing within a radius of a half hundred miles the scenes of the most continuous activities of the late war, the foot of the compass must be placed where these names attach. Greater interests centered at the rival capitals, but the commission to which they gave rise were kept at a distance. Bloodier battles took place elsewhere, but hardly a campaign was planned or fought which did not have its relation to this spot. The most dramatic episode of the age took place here, one whose antecedent circumstances, stage setting and results would have been thought over drawn were they the creations of Scott or Cooper. Not alone did the guns of the "Merrimac" sink the good ship "Cumberland," they sank the old navies of the World. In one-half hour the "Ironsides," the "Heart of Oak," and all the resounding equipment of naval history, poetry and romance became obsolete, and ineffective. Not merely did the "Monitor" out point her rival terror, but she set the fashion in armor, which all the sea-tailors have since closely followed. The local history of this region takes us back through the earlier wars far beyond the memory of the living, back almost to the origin of all things American—to that name of the most commonplace names and the most incredible experience—John Smith. Nature designed the Hampton Roads, like the Bosphorus and Gibraltar for great events when she planned the four stately waterways which radiate hence to the four cardinal points, in times of excitement things could not help happening here.

The climate of this favorite spot is as fine as any in the word, and good health is chronic all the year round. Placed on the border line between the tropical and frigid it escapes the enervation of the one and the rigors of the other, while sharing the blessings of both. Sea breezes temper the elsewhere scorching rays of August, while the Gulf Stream delivers daily in winter its warmth stored up at the far away South. As to society, Old Point Comfort is the unbending place of the diplomat, the statesman and all the functionaries of the National Government. The meeting and resting place of tourists flitting Southward in Autumn and Winter from their playspots in the North, and Northward in the Springtime from Florida. Then, too, it is the rendezvous of many who hold the place in most affectionate regard, and spend a portion of each recurring Winter and Spring amid its varied attractions.

This is one of the stations of the New York Yatch Club, and the Winter quarters of the White Squadron are in Hampton Roads, directly in front of the house. The Hygeia is naturally the centre of the social life. The officers from the fleet with those from the fortress, gather at the hotel each evening, and a more brilliant assemblage than that to be seen in the great parlors and rotunda is difficult to imagine, the dazzling uniforms of the officers forming with the handsome gowns of the ladies a fascinating social picture, which is duplicated at no other resort in the country. There is dancing each evening, and a grand hop is given every Monday night. I will mention briefly a few of the points of interest, and the first one is the National Soldiers Home, a government institution for disabled veteran soldiers. Total number of inmates 3,760. We saw them in their dining room eating supper, which was a grand sight to us. Next interesting point is the National Cemetery. Buried here are 6,424. The Hampton Normal Indian School is the next point of interest, where Indian and colored people are educated. Here you can secure a guide on application at the office. A short distance from the Normal School is ex-President Tyler's old mansion, it is used as a private residence, and is not open to visitors. St. John's church, in Hampton, is the next point of attraction. It is 233 years old, and it is claimed that the Rev. D. Mossom, who married George Washington and the widow Custis, was stationed here at one time. Hampton, in the time of the renowned Capt. John Smith, was then called Kecoughtan, after a small tribe of Indians. This village was settled by the English in 1612; in 1705 it was given by law the name of Hampton. The Newport News Dry Dock, the largest and finest in the world, is a point of interest you should not fail to visit. It covers 70 acres and furnishes employment to 5,000 men. We were also in the old prison which was at one time occupied by Jefferson Davis. Ethel has a piece of the plastering which she is going to bring home as a souvenir. Gov. Woodfin of the soldiers home died while we were here, and there were over 5,000 attended his funeral. It was a grand sight to see over 3,000 old soldiers in funeral procession in which the Mason's took a prominent part. We have nothing to do here only eat, sleep, and go bathing, which we do every day.

Yours Truly,
W. H. COLE.

I PURCHASED a granite monument from Jas. Spencer, for my grandfather's lot in Carlisle Cemetery. The work was strictly first-class in every respect. I am thoroughly pleased with same.
