The Market Again. The market for the week ending September 10, 1912, was characterized by a general decline in prices. The principal cause of this was the heavy selling of the market by the Government, which has been continuing since the beginning of the year. The market for wheat was particularly weak, and the price of the staple fell to a low point. The market for cotton was also weak, and the price of the staple fell to a low point. The market for sugar was also weak, and the price of the staple fell to a low point.
