CONGRESS MUST WORK RAPIDLY

Little Progress Has Been Made with Any Measure But Budget Bills.

ATTITUDE OF THE DEMOCRATS

They Probably Will Support Legislation Sanctioned by the People—Republicans Suspicious Because Opponents Urge Nomination of Roosevelt.

Washington.—If congress wishes to go before the country with a record of full consideration for the tariff question it will be necessary for it to do a good deal of work within the next six or eight weeks. The house and senate have been in session since the first Monday in December and if the appropriations bills be excluded enough number of measures which are well forward on the road to passage have been congratulatorily few.

It has been shown by the history of nearly all congresses that when the senators and the representatives begin to think about going home to work and do if they manage to get through with a good deal of business in a short order. The postal savings bank bill has passed the senate, but the house has not yet given it considera-tion except in committee. The state commerce bill was introduced in the senate and the house on the same day almost the same moment, and the senate has had it under consideration, but has made many changes in the measure. The house will probably make changes, but they are not in many respects less than those which were made in the house.

No Conservation Bills Passed.

No conservation measures have yet passed congress. President Taft has been urging that at least two conservation bills should be passed during the country's natural resources. Near-ly all the democrats in the house and from Speaker Cannon and in other republicans are opposed.

Democrats Against Control?

Republicans in congress are speculating as to what the democrats will do if a tariff bill is framed by the lower house in the Sixty-second congress. The democrats in the senate are consulting privately as to what they will be free to do if they come into a partial control of the house but of the lead.

There is a strong chance that the senate of the United States can be controlled by democrats after March, 1913, when a new administration takes office and when a new congress is elected. Therefore if the present majority in the house is 1911 it could not hope to control the senate by much legislation that would give the senate control of the house.

Some of the democratic senators contend that the democrats can put through a tariff bill if they succeeds in getting control of the senate and in securing an out and out democratic majority in the house. They say that they then could frame a bill in accordance with their own ideas and having come into power on a tariff issue, would be justified in passing such a bill, will never be changed by the republicans. Other democratic senators, however, declare that if they should frame a bill which the president has asked congress to frame, the president would be justified in vetoing it. They contend, however, that the Republicans would not dare to vote to override the veto, but would be forced to accept the democratic measure.

Democratic Leaders.

The democratic leaders in the house are Champ Clark of Missouri, the leading Democrat in the house, and Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, the democratic member of the ways and means committee. Mr. Underwood is not in full sympathy with the democratic leaders in the senate, and this is due to a personal difference between Senator Bailey of Texas and Mr. Underwood. Mr. Underwood has been sacrificed by the democratic leaders in the senate because of both parties may get together through considerable legislation between now and the date of adjournment, and it is probable that it must be put through quickly and in a hurry. Mr. Underwood is said to sit until Washington awakens in an usual sudden hour host.

Roosevelt Still Silent.

It seems to be certain that the office of Theodore Roosevelt will not be to be broken until he reaches Khartoum, Egypt, and that the colonel seems to prefer to keep his own counsel in affecting Repub-

Athletic Training.

Nothing could be more elusive than the idea that by a period of athletic training a man can lay in a store of health and strength upon which he can draw later when engaged in a sedentary occupation. The truth is that the man who has been in a well trophied heart of the athlete are perfectly developed in every way who no longer has the time or the inclination for such exercises by which he keeps the original store intact or simply returning to their original level. The only way to get rid of the many forms of degeneration and to keep the body of perfection is to keep it in daily exercise by which their original services.

It is not quite true that all exercise for its own sake is harmless, for it is well to be prepared for the meeting of life's little emergencies as well as its ordinary and daily demands, but it probably is true that, the exercise which is taken for its own sake tends to going about his customary business and pleasure to keep himself in the condition which that business and pleasure demand and that gentleman's exercise is superfluous or injurious.

BALLOTING ON PEACE TERMS

STORMY SESSION AND BITTER ARRAIGNMENT OF LEADERS FOR BROKEN PROMISES.

STIRRING SPEECHES BY LEADERS

Sentiment Apparently in Favor of Settlement on As Good Terms As Can Be Effected—Cheers for Both Peace and War.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The stirring current men, in a mass meeting at Labor Lyceum Hall, are balloting upon the proposition of peace with Mexico upon terms of peace as submitting to them by the Mexican revolutionists.

Sentiment seemed to be overwhelmingly for settlement upon the best terms to be had, and the leaders post poned the vote at 10 o'clock in the hope of an effort to stem the tide. Their in-fluence, however, appeared to be on the wane. Stirring speeches by C. O. Sherman, president of the Industrial Workers of the World, and by the representatives of the leaders.

Cheers were shouting from the floor and the platform at the same time. With a show of hands the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of settlement.

Applause was every indication that Pratt would go down to defeat, that the entire ticket would be swept to victory in 1912. It is the sentiment of the rank and file of the party as it was expressed at its face value.

In a speech delivered in the house of Representatives Speaker Cannon declared that the Democratic party was "in the saddle and on the horse" and "can ride it as it pleases." He said that the democratic party was responsible for the present tariff law, and that the democratic party was responsible for the present currency law. He declared that the democratic party was responsible for the present tariff law, and that the democratic party was responsible for the present currency law. He declared that the democratic party was responsible for the present tariff law, and that the democratic party was responsible for the present currency law.

FATAL BALLOON ASCENSION

The Pioneers Break Away in a Fierce Storm With Tragic Ending.

Stettin, Germany.—The German balloon Pioneer has met with a disaster here, but with a series of accidents which in the annals of aeronautics are the most tragic circumstances in the list of fatalities. Four men lost their lives including the radical member of the party, Herr Hauptmann Hugo Delbrueck. Herr Delbrueck was the leading spirit of the party were drowned, a third was killed by the fall of the balloon, unconscious and he died from his injuries, while the fourth was rendered a serious condition by a leg.

The balloon was caught in a hurricane and the Poomeen broke away before the storm. Soon her fuel gave out, she soon collided with telegraph wire, which broke, almost overturning the basket. It then dashed into the roof of a neighboring factory, destroying the smokestack. With the basket swaying wildly, and half of its ropes gone, the balloon was driven over Stettin and disappeared in the clouds at terrific speed.
