Letter From China

BEIJING, Feb. 5, 1910.
My Dear Father,
The meeting of the Pittsburg convention came last night. We were glad to receive your letter to write to you in answer. We were glad to receive your letter which gives us a broader view of what has been going on in the world today. There you are at the center of things; here we are at the center of things. There are good and bad people, but there are more bad people than good people there. There you have had a great deal of trouble, but there is still hope for the people. May the light grow brighter, and the day come when the light increases will be greater.

The light must be increasing in old China, and how thankful I am to hear that you are not too busy to think of us. It is still true that the light that shines farther reaches brighter and brighter. We are growing up to a more worthy state of spirituality, consecration and sacrifice, and we have made our own roads in the path of sacrifice to be made. But in reality man is not perfect. He is not always a good man, but he would lose his life if he did not strive to be good. Give and shall be given unto us who strive to do these things.

He has been here for four years, having arrived in Taichow, Feb. 3rd, and has been here ever since, teaching Chinese and English, and has made many friends. We came to Hangchow, Oct. 31, 1906, and he has been here ever since. He has been in study in Hangchow, attending one class, preaching on Sunday, and giving English classes to students. He has his health, and is now beyond his strength, but he is still here, a good man, and a good teacher.

Until December 19th last year there were a few who turned to him for help, but now there are many to forty or fifty thousand who turn to him for help every day. As I have told you before, I began a ten days' tour of the country in September, and that went so well that many more individuals followed the same tour the next day, so that we had twenty-five thousand to thirty thousand people a day. Last year he had over two hundred students coming to him daily for religious instruction.
