HISTORICAL SKETCH OF A REMARKABLE MAN

Rise of John C. C. Mayo, the Man Who Developed Resources of Eastern Kentucky.

Paintsville, Ky.—Does the world owe more to its dreamers than its doers? The men and women who have made inventions have ever blazed the path from one era to a new and better order. With the power of a loyal faith the dreamers have followed the path and wrought out the mighty feats of progress. In our political history the precepts of the one and the deeds of the other are duly recorded within the halls of fame, but in our industrial history the latter role have been few for the strong spirits who have wrested treasures from the comforts that we enjoy.

This is a story of industrial conquest that will appeal to the dreamer and the doer, for men and women who have dreamed and wrought energy he organized combined the resources with his dreams and brought forth the wealth that had been hidden from the eyes of men for years he had risen from the ranks of a country merchant to be a multimillionaire. He is the captain of industry.

The story of a large fortune is not unusual but happily, Mr. Mayo is not content to be ranked by success. He farm and traveled the world over in search of wealth and discovered, when he returned, that he was penniless. Not his diamond fields had been found on the farm that he had left. Not so with John Mayo. He found that there was treasure at home. We have said that he was a dreamer. He delved into the riches which had been hidden for ages and satisfied himself in an intelligent study of coal that he could see wealth beneath their rugged sides. To be sure of this, however, required years of patience and the constant exertion of a small savings from seventy generally thought to be visionary for a dissolute and worthless one. others were described by a terrific explosion as the dismayed corner mine at Hoote, Mont.

JOHN C. C. MAYO,
Of Paintsville, Ky.

Mr. Mayo's life has played the leading roles in the most exciting incidents of the greatest mountain warfare at Chicago. The whole program of a settlement of a feud, the establishment of peace with former enemies, the organization of many companies giving practical assistance to the Republicans will retain control of the next house.

Two men were blown to fragments with pieces clinging to the mine rocks for a distance of 200 feet and two
