SYNOPSIS
At the expense of a lot of money, the Gill family had a new house built. The house was a masterpiece of modern architecture, and the Gill family were proud of it. One day, a man named Bill came to the house and asked to see the architect. The Gill family were surprised to see him, and they showed him the house. Bill was very impressed with the house, and he told the Gill family that he had a plan for a new house that was even better than the one they had. The Gill family were very interested in Bill's plan, and they decided to build a new house. The new house was built, and it was a masterpiece of modern architecture. The Gill family were very proud of it, and they lived happily ever after.
