CROP CONDITIONS LOOKING UP

June Report More Encouraging Than May.

TOBACCO ABOUT SIXTY PER CENT

Oats Almost a Complete Failure, Not Tall Enough to Cut in Many Places. Hay Will Be Short—Attention Paid to Alfalfa—Pasturage a Serious Question.

Frankfort.—Commissioner Rankin in his crop report says that the farmers who took his advice and seed potatoes breed seed in plant beds and in the latitude of Louisville have planted to stand the drought than the farmers who bought the inferior seed. Especially is this true of corn.

The tobacco crop shows a better condition than had been expected, and while not more than a 60 per cent crop, taking the state as a whole, the farmers will fare better than the report for May intimated.

The average condition of corn over the state is better than was shown by the report of May. The percentage as compared with a good crop last year is 75 for the entire state. Last month the report was 69 per cent. This is a gain of 6 per cent, thus showing an increase of 5 per cent in the condition of the crop.

Wheat is still in good condition, but there has been as much of the crop threshed to give any accurate report as to the yield.

The hay crop will be very short in Kentucky this year. Alfalfa is the best crop for the farmer, as it withstands drought better than timothy and clover. This department for the past three years has been advocating the farmers of Kentucky to plant more alfalfa. The timothy crop, which has been the source of wealth to the farmers of this state. As yet there has not been very much cutting of alfalfa, but those farmers are saving its value and have no fear of drought.

In many sections of the state the pasturage question was getting to be very serious before the rains came and started the growth of grass, and in some sections stock water was reported as very low.

Corn Crop Looks Good.

Frankfort.—The prospect for a corn crop in Kentucky is much better than two weeks ago, according to the latest crop report. Farmers from all sections of the state say the recent rains will be required to make a bumper crop.

KENTUCKY TEACHERS IN ANNUAL MEETING

Opening Addresses Delivered and Papers Read, Which Urge Greater Activity in School Matters—Session Devoted to Women Recommended.

Greenshore.—The fortieth annual session of the Kentucky Educational association was called to order and officers elected. President, Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, Morehead; first vice president, James Speed, Louisville; second vice president, James Gifford, Bardstown; third vice president, W. D. Davis, Harlan; secretary, J. M. Money, Shelbyville.

The time and place of the next meeting were not fixed, being left to a committee, which will meet in December.

The following resolution, introduced by Mrs. Lucia Breckenridge, of Lexington, was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the Kentucky Educational association recommend school service for women and urge upon the next session of the legislature that they grant it."

Greenshore.—That Kentucky is on the eve of great educational awakening in its history is manifest by the meeting of the Kentucky Educational association. The second day's session was replete with brilliant addresses, each progressive, but the theme being "better rural schools for Kentucky." The attendance was large, there being nearly 600 educators in the auditorium representing every section of Kentucky.

Superintendent Ellsworth Harrodsburg was on the program. He is a University of The Kentucky and the Rural Schools to the Economic, Social and Spiritual Welfare of the State." He declared that it is a great fact that city children have much better schools than country children and that city children are favored by the state.

KENTUCKY LINCOLN WAY.

Uniting of Four States the Ultimate Project—Hon. P. Jones Tells of Possibilities.

Louisville.—The plan to reconstruct the old Louisville and Nashville turnpike and convert that famous thoroughfare into a Lincoln way gives promise of success now that the preliminary campaign for a fund of $25,000 to finance the work of rebuilding the road has produced satisfactory results. The subscriptions have far exceeded expectations, and the Lincoln way boosters believe that with one more canvass to be held later on, the amount necessary to begin work on the high way will be raised.

The enthusiasm manifested by those who subscribed in behalf of the alleged dynamite conspirators.

Clarence Darrow, chief counsel for the defense, and Edward Adamson, his assistant, left for Indianapolis, where they will confer with Attorney Frank Wilson, who is in charge of the prosecution, and the Lincoln way boosters believe that with one more canvass to be held later on, the amount necessary to begin work on the high way will be raised.

• • •

According to Jones.

"It will attract more people here," he said, "and that means a better showing for Louisville in the next report of the census bureau. The result will be city develop in size, but it will be strengthened commercially. Our markets will grow fast when the Lincoln way has been built, because many more farmers out in the state will bring their products to this city. Those men have been needing a good highway to Louisville. They know and fully understand that it means comfortable and economical travel. Automobiles will reduce prices on market products and enable farmers to live better and be thrifty. Besides this it will get them in the town with the people in the city.

• • •

Good Investment.

That the Lincoln way subscriptions are investments rather than donations was the statement made by Mr. Jones, who said:

"You may be sure that every dollar expended in building the Lincoln way will be returned to the donor, and not out a few of the benefits that will accrue. The value of property along the road will always be of great value to on account of its location on the road, the reputation for having originated the idea. This good name never can and will not stop in Kentucky. It has already gone to the four corners of the earth. Think of the advertisement it has for Kentucky already."

The Lincoln way project provides for a reconstruction of the Louisville & Nashville turnpike from the Louisville city limits, thence to Elizabethtown, Hodgenville, Lebanon, Danville and Stanford, and terminating just beyond Franklin, in Simpson county. The road will have branches extending to Shelbyville, Bardstown, Lancaster, Stanford and the main highway over the Dixie Clay City and Mountain.

The Mystery of Malta

THE STRANGE HYPOGAEUM AT PAULA

BY A. HUGH FISHER

STONE is nowhere far from the surface in Malta. In open country almost every level piece of ground is round slabs in even rows making the paved spaces appear like the deck of some western packet-boat, cover the old granaries, that were round chambers cut in the solid rock with wells smooth as if made many years. At Citta Vecchia, the ancient capital of the island and citadel—probably due out by the Cherubim—undermine a large
