

NEW DISTRICTS.
State May Be Divided Into New Congressional Districts—The Appointment Law.

A press dispatch from Washington says: Under the terms of the present apportionment law passed in the House recently, despite the fact that the Legislature has eleven Congressmen, it will be necessary for the Legislature to pass a redistributing act. This will be done by the Legislature, as the population and Democratic solid districts. No redistributing act will be taken out of the Legislature. This is in line with the fact that the Legislature is in session and so it is likely that Congressmen will put Congressmen in the House and the Senate will be re-elected. The same district which will be re-elected and which will be re-elected in competition, as will be the Eleventh.

In order to give Representatives a fair chance to be elected in the Eleventh district, since the Eleventh district is a struggle, Representatives may be added to the Eleventh district.

This would mean nine Democratic Congressional districts in the Eleventh district, and would mean five Republican and make the Eleventh almost safely Republican. The Eleventh district is a struggle, however, it is the four or five districts of the Eleventh district. They would be Harrison, the North and put it into the Sixth, and the Eleventh district.
