The RING and the MAN

WITH SOME INCIDENTAL REFLATION TO THE WOMAN

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Illustrations by Lemuel Ayres

SYNOPSIS.

A foolish young bridegroom becomes fascinated with the bold, artful wife of a prize fighter. Mrs. Haldane, who has been married for five years, discovers a true ring in a diamond but she confesses to the husband of her affections only after the villainous boy has gone to the lobby, taking the other train. Haldane, who is on the same railroad station, the woman's body falls exhausted, the fourth love for the husband is so strong. Seeing he is not there, the woman returns for several days a stone drift and rides on a freight train to Haldane's home. Haldane's mother-in-law, Mrs. Stewart, has been away from Haldane's home for five years. She has been a widow for a long time. Haldane is a wealthy and wealthy gentleman, a beautiful and wealthy gentleman, and a cooperative with her in business. Haldane's mother-in-law, Mrs. Stewart, has been away from Haldane's home for five years. She has been a widow for a long time. Haldane is a wealthy and wealthy gentleman, a beautiful and wealthy gentleman, and a cooperative with her in business. Haldane's mother-in-law, Mrs. Stewart, has been away from Haldane's home for five years. She has been a widow for a long time. Haldane is a wealthy and wealthy gentleman, a beautiful and wealthy gentleman, and a cooperative with her in business.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

"I love your daughter in ways that I doubt you are wise to understand, but I would not take her on such conditions as those you mean me to offer. I would not degrade her by thinking of her on such terms, even if I lost her forever. I am unworthy of her now, God knows! but I would be so far beneath her under such circumstances that I could not even look at her again. I don't understand how she could have been born of such a father."

"I will not be talked to in that manner by you, sir," cried Haldane, who did not lack courage. "I have already definitely declined your proposal for my daughter's hand."

"I will take that declination from her, and from no one else!" said Gormly.

"She will repent it, I am sure, if she hears with what insolence you have treated me."

"And I pray God for the sake of her love toward you and her respect toward you that she may never hear one word of what you have said. I have had enough of this interview. Mr. Haldane."

He turned to the door.

"Wait!" said Haldane.

"I hear another infamous proposition from you."

"No, sir. But I have something more to say, and it is this. You are not an involuntary scoundrel, sir, but that you might be glad for a little judicious silence."

"What do you mean?"

"Never mind what I mean. You publish what you have there at your peril! I warn you that in two days thereafter, your name will ring as a scoundrel and a blackguard through out the United States."

Having tried bribery and failed, you now resort to threats," said Gormly.

But that you are her father—" He clenched his fist, stood staring a minute, then shrugged his shoulders, shook his head and turned away.

"You won't be watched, then?" said Haldane.

"Not by you."

"And you intend to publish my revelation?"

"Exculpatory."

"I shall tell Eleanor that you have done it!"

"I shall tell her myself!" returned Gormly, leaving open the door. "Good-day," he called, as he stepped into the hall. When the young man presented himself, he thus addressed him: "Your father and I have had a rather painful interview, into the details of which it is not necessary to enter. I have only to say that the story I told you now in the newspaper is wrong. And now," he held out his hand, "good-by. I wish that we might have fought together until the end."

"But we are going to fight together until the end," cried the young man fiercely. "I love my father, and until now I have always respected him. I have nothing more to follow his lead, but I can do so no longer."

"You will both of you live to regret it," cried old Haldane after a bitter look at the pair. With his head high he marched out through the door. "Do you want?" he said coldly as he closed it behind him. "You will see what will happen to you in a day or two!"

"What does it mean?" asked Miss Stewart.

"It means," said Livingstone, "that my father is tangled up with a gang of scoundrels, that he is the brain and backbone of the Gotham Freight Traction company that we are fighting, and that he is in close alliance with the Jackson society. It means that we—my family and I—are disinherited. It means that I no longer have the right to ask you what I had intended to ask you when the campaign was over and we had won, to be my wife."

"Are you asking me now?" cried Miss Stewart excitedly.

"I would be if it was proper."

"It is proper," she said, blushing divinely.

"You mean—"

"You goose!" said the girl, "I don't love your father or your family."

Here Gormly turned and went into the drawing room again. When he came back, which he did not do until summoned by Miss Stewart herself, he confronted the blushing pair.

"You could not have chosen a truer, better man than Mr. Haldane," he said, as he took his daughter's hand. "I am the luckiest man on earth."

He sighed deeply and regretted as he spoke.

"I want to do something for you now," said young Haldane.

"Well, there is one thing you can do for me."

"What is that?"

"I want to see your sister, and immediately."

I will have her here in ten minutes," said Stewart the head man, tearing himself away from Miss Stewart without another word.

CHAPTER XIV.

Gormly Reveals His Greatest Tempta-tion.

Gormly had faced many difficult situations in his life. Even his experience of business career had confronted him with many problems. But he had never contemplated anything which imposed upon him a task equal to his judgment and his feelings as the present. The head of Independent Traction knew that young Haldane would take to indure his father in order to win him, how much of what had transpired he would tell her. Gormly had no means of knowing of course, but he felt confident that he would not. It was hardly human that the victorious traction magnate should be confronted by the picture of young Haldane, the son of Palmer's connection with the Gotham Freight Traction company that we are fighting, and that he is in close alliance with the Jackson society. It means that we—my family and I—are disinherited. It means that I no longer have the right to ask you what I had intended to ask you when the campaign was over and we had won, to be my wife."

"Are you asking me now?" cried Miss Stewart excitedly.

"I would be if it was proper."

"It is proper," she said, blushing divinely.

"You mean—"

"You goose!" said the girl, "I don't love your father or your family."

Here Gormly turned and went into the drawing room again. When he came back, which he did not do until

"And This Is Why You Made Me That Offer of Marriage?"

now in the hall and in another moment the library door was opened and Miss Haldane entered the room alone. He had risen on her approach and stood confronting her. She was evidently greatly surprised.

"I did not know you were here," she began. Livingstone did not tell me. I did not expect—"

"It was to see me, or rather that I might see you, that you were brought here, and I alone am responsible."

"It is a most extraordinary proceeding, and one that will terminally," said Haldane who I was brought to you."

"It was necessary for me to see you," returned the man.

"Then why didn't you come to my house?"

"I could not."

"Why not?"

"There are reasons which will probably render me forever an unwelcome visitor to your house."

"I believe," said the girl slowly, "that something very serious must have happened, or you would not have had me brought here."

"I can scarcely bear to tell you."

"You alarm me beyond measure!" cried the girl, pressing her hands to her breast as if to still its wild throbbing. "You must not keep me in suspense any longer! What is it that you have to tell me? What is it that is likely to come between us?"

"This," responded Gormly, handing her a few typewritten sheets of paper.

"Am I to read this?" she asked, taking it from him and looking very straight at him.

"But is it necessary?"

"Absolutely."

"Why?"

"The cause of popular government is being tried on that issue. The contest transcends in importance any political battle that has ever been waged. It is that that has ever been and for and by the people is to be a success, we must have honesty in office or else go down, it may be forever. The people have a right to know what is back of the Harbern society where to get its representation in congress. I should be a traitor, false to my duty as a betrayer of my trust, if I should withhold this knowledge that has come to me."

"It is all true," she said at last, "You say my father here?"

"Yes."

"He was very much agitated at some news that my brother brought him a short time ago," Dora Living stone knew."

"He does," I told him."

"Why?"

"To give him an opportunity to withdraw from association with us in view of this startling fact."

"And what did he decide?"

"He decided to stay with me."

"And this is why you made me that offer of marriage now rather than later?"

"Yes, I wanted you to feel, after you had this news, that while I alone know it, I paid you the highest compliment that I could think of, that my heart was irrevocably pledged to you whatever was to happen."

"That was kind of you. You have always been kind to me."

"I don't see how you can say so after this," protested to the paper. "Perhaps it would be more merciful to—"

"Just as you think best. I am a strong woman. I can bear anything it is short," there was a long pause—"my father?"

He nodded his head.

"What has he done?"

"Miss Haldane," he began, "I say to you quite simply that I would rather be dead than stand here as I do now with the burden of telling you that your father is the head and front, the backbone, the brains, the gullibe, the overwriting, of the Gotham Freight company and the Harbern society."

Mr God!" exclaimed Miss Haldane, the paper dropping from her fingers to the floor.

She was paler than ever. She stared at him almost in dumb incomprehension. Her body swayed slightly. Gormly stepped closer to her, seized her gently supported her to a chair by the library table. She put her face in her hands and rocked to and fro silently.

"I can't be true," she said at last. "You are mistaken. Surely not for that man in that sink of corruption and infidelity and iniquity and shame! Say it isn't true!"

"I wish to heaven I could say it, but—" The man shook his head. "I told you that I would rather have died than tell you, but you insisted upon it."

"You are not to blame," answered the woman, her sense of justice uppermost in the fact that she had to accept. "If it be a fact. There must be some mistake."

"I wish there was."

"Are you sure absolutely?"

Your father confessed it here in this room a half hour ago."

"Why do you tell me of it?"

Because I was the agent," "the whole world has to know it, and I preferred to tell you myself rather that you get it from the newspapers."

"You are going to publish it?"

"Tomorrow morning."

"But why—why?"

She threw out her arms in nervous appeal.

"Think," said the man, "it is the one fact that makes my election certain."

"And does your ambition run to the wrecking of my father's good name in order that you may be elected?"

"No. If you will think, you will know that it does not. I am doing it for the sake of honor, for the sake of duty, for the sake of humanity," he paused and raised his own hand. "So help me God!" he cried with upturned face.

For the Hostess

A Good Musical Contest.

There seems to be no end to most social games. Perhaps our young readers are not remember this one as it was printed many years ago. On cards write the following questions:

1. Where is the earth?
2. What is the sun?
3. What do the weary need?
4. A powerful article in a cook's?
5. Found plentifully in most rivers?
6. Part of a fish?
7. An important part of a letter?
8. What is to be learned by ordinary folks?
9. What do all public speakers do sometimes?
10. Not served to harmons?
11. What is a proper vessel music with disharmony?
12. What looks the stones when the horse is gone?
13. The one who guesses the most answers!

ANSWERS

1. In space.
2. Nuisance.
3. Rest.
4. Recipe.
5. Shark.
6. Fin.
7. Signature

1. Major.
2. Nuisance.
3. Minors
4. Hymns.
5. Key.
6. Sole.
7. Sign.

Choosing Partners.

To choose partners for a card party is a delightful method. Cut cards label in what are called "patty" cake tins and ice with pink for the unmarried girls, with yellow for the men in the room, with white for the married women and green for the married men. In these tins put each time of bolding a thimble, duplicate mottoes, books and pencils. Then the girl who finds a thimble gets a key finds the pencil, he has a ring and gives the pencil, girl with a book finds the man with an ear, etc. This is great fun and is adaptable to any game where a choice of partners is necessary.

A Novel Shower.

A girl who was to marry and go to Mexico to live was the recipient of this pretty and novel shower. She was invited to luncheon at the home of her best girl friend and found a most delightful table ornamented by a circle of small pine trees, each for a white Jardiniere. Alternating with the trees were glass candlesticks holding green candles capped by white shades. Inside this circle was a huge wedding cake on top of which was a miniature bride and bridegroom. All went merry as the proverbial marriage bell, tongues flew and the luncheon ended hour of new hours. When the love were served the honored guest was asked to cut the cake —and behold, her knife went right through into white tissue paper and she found a shower of dainty and useful articles concealed within the fake cake, which in reality was a chosen box topped with tissue paper and thin cardboard, which had been cleverly iced over.

A Knickerbocker Party.

A mother who was about to put her small son into his first trousers conceived the clever idea of holding a party in his honor on the eventful day. On her card she wrote "Come to meet our little man Jack at three on Saturday, dressed as he is."

The first game is for the amusement of the children and is called "mixing style." A picture of an animal is pinned on the coat or dress of each as they pass in line. The leader should be a grown-up boy, who will be able to manage better than a younger child. He says he wishes to get a number of dogs in a row, and then the children scatter over the room in search of them. When the end of this animal they are supposed to assemble. All go out except the "mixed" caught, and if they are especially clever the leader can employ them all around to the corner of the circus, who represents the animals.

This is a lively game, keenly enjoyed by all children, and the result is little clowns and serve pink lemonade, with cake to match, and ice cream in animal forms, of course have the shopping motto cape which all still wear here.

MADAME MERRY.

Simple Dresses

THE costume at the left has the bodice made with a deep yoke, tucked in the yoke and sloped to basque, which has double revers, tucked and sewn forms the yoke and under-sleeves. The skirt has upper panel made in zephyr with a band of broderie Anglaise at the foot. A ribbon to match zephyr is taken round the waist.

Materials required: Three yards broadcloth 27 inches wide, three yards zephyr 28 inches wide.

For the first time there are any number of pretty striped cottons that might be used in the panel front and back the stripes run perpendicularly, the bodice and the side-extending to panels of lower part, and the sleeves and collar to have a narrow piece in which the stripes run horizontally; buttons form a pretty finish to lower part of sides.

The sides and sleeves of the bodice are cut together, and the front and side being panels to match skirt; the horizontal stripes are carried up between panels and side.

The yoke is of tucked spotted net; lace falls over shoulder like a collar. The sleeves are trimmed with bands of horizontal stripes, the under-sleeves of lace.

Hat of black zeff white crinolline, trimmed with ostrich feathers.

The ribbon waist-band is passed through rings each side, back and front.

Materials required: Six yards 40 wide, 22 buttons, five-eighths yard net 18 inches wide, one yard lace 4 inches wide.

"AUTOMOBILING WITH PAY"

PLEASANT WORK—GOOD SALARIES

Many men are now earning $25 to $50 a week as automobile salesmen and demonstrators. Trained Men are needed. Write today for our free booklet, "Automobiling with Pay." It tells how we have trained and secured positions for over 25,000 men. Write today for booklet No. 81-B.

Y. M. C. A. AUTOMOBILE SCHOOL
DAN McGANN CINCINNATI, OHIO

God is closer to us than any treatise can be.

And He's Not Alone.

However What do you think of him? Fuwell—He has all of the eccentricities of genius without the genius.

Didn't Break It Around Her.

Ella—Our friend, the pitcher, has a "frisse arm."

Stella—I didn't notice it when he called on me last evening.

Fatty of Vain Regrets.

The late John W. Gates, an incurable optimist, harped continually on the futility of pessimism. One of Mr. Gates's epigrams, still quoted on the Chicago Stock Exchange, runs:

"He who nurses foolish hopes may be an ass, but he is not such an ass as he who nurses vain regrets."

Masculine Anxiety.

Teddy's mother had been taken suddenly ill one morning while he was at school. On his return, he was admitted to his mother's room for a few minutes, and found his Aunt Alice sitting by the bed.

"Auntie," said she, "mother has been very ill, and must not talk."

"O, my! I'm sorry, mother," gasped Teddy.

Mother smiled at him lovingly.

Master Teddy seated himself on a large chair directly opposite, and, after wriggling uneasily, remained for a minute or two, delivered himself of the following speech:

"Mother dear—now don't try to speak—but if you mess yes, nod your head—this way—and if you mess no, shake your head—this way. Have you seen my baseball bat?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

HIS EXPERIENCES.

"Were you ever in love?"

"Did I? I've known heaps of men that were."

Red Cross Christmas Seals.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis will this year, as in 1908, be the national agent for the American Red Cross in handling the sale of Red Cross seals. A new national office has been opened in Washington, and an initial order has been placed for 50,000,000 seals, although it is expected that double that number will be sold. The charge to local agents for the seals will be 12½ per cent, of the gross proceeds, the national agent forbidding the seals and advertising material, and taking back all unsold seals at the end of the season. Postmaster General Hitchcock has approved of the design of the seal. Owing to the fact that many people last year used Red Cross seals for postage, the post office department has given orders that letters or packages bearing seals on the face will not be carried through the mails.

Easy Breakfast!

A bowl of crisp

Post Toasties

and cream—
the thing's done!

Appetizing
Nourishing
Convenient

Ready to serve right out of the package.

"The Memory Lingers"

POSTUM CEREAL CO., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

IN VOGUE

* Much pink linen in coarse weave is seen.

Unmoired feathers of every description are used on hats.

Wool embroidery is used in either bold attention of in simply finished flowers on velvet girdles or on sombre fabrics.

Broderie anglaise or English eyelet embroidery is very popular and is used after a short rest and is a greater favorite than ever.

A few collarless waists are being shown for fall, but the majority of waists are made with a high collar, to look so much better when worn with a wrap.

New cloth coats in the fall showings are generally of scary rough materials, double faced, with the reverse side of plain color, which is used for the trimming.

Skirts are actually wider; fall models from the greatest manufacturers are cut so as to give a surface effect, but measure two and a half yards around the foot.

Repossee Late.

What the dressmakers term pushed out lace is the new kind to use on thin frocks. It is really repossee lace, and the pattern is worked on an indented part of the dot is turned toward the eye. It is quite a attractive lace, as the patterns are in long sprays of flowers and vines. This dotted lace is quite fashionable and promises to be very much in imitation Venetian and Milanese.

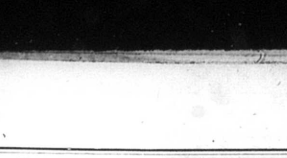
Pearl buttons are a complete into fine fashion. It has a coarse mesh and a wide, bold design worked out on it. Pearl mesh is also attractive and it is widely used for handsome gowns and coats when it is half covered with thick padded Chinese embroidery.

Birds' Fine Sympathy.

Parrots and even canaries have been known to refuse to eat and have died in sorrow and grief over the loss of their human companions.

The Search for the Soul

By H. I. McMAHON



CONSISTENCY WITH DEGREE IS A JEWEL WORTH WEARING

THE mystery of life! Will science ever solve that riddle? What will the "Big Fighter" in Emerson's famous poem say when the eager questioner behind him demands the answer and the question, too? Incredible as it may seem, scientists are even now doing that very thing. In the near future you and I should be prepared to hear them announce most learnedly and scientifically the discovery of the human soul.

Here and there, in hospital laboratories widely scattered, men of science are probing into the mystery. Like the mediaeval scientists who lived in dread of the ban of Mother Church, they are mostly working secretly and are not telling half they know. For they realize that modern machine of modern progress, has its church, too, as it has its conventions and its heterodoxy, its hierarchy of established rules and its excommunication and set anathema for expounders of heresies.

So far the evidence these bold investigators have secured is chiefly negative, yet nevertheless highly significant. In the first place, one of them found that physical death is accompanied by a sudden loss of body weight varying from three-quarters of an ounce to nearly an ounce and a quarter. Some curious experiments of this kind were made by Dr. Duncan MacDougall, of Haverhill, Mass.

His first subject was a man dying of tuberculosis. He selected a patient dying from disease because of the advantage such a situation characterizes the final stages of death occurs with the least physical movement. With a patient quiet, the beam of the scales can be kept true and no error in weighing will be evidenced.

In this experiment the patient was lying on a bed arranged on a light framework which was built on very delicately balanced platform scales. He was under observation three hours and forty minutes before death. He lost weight slowly at the rate of an ounce an hour, due to the evaporation of perspiration and respiration.

Keenly the physician watched the fading hours and minutes of the most spent life. And then—suddenly, coincident with death—the beam of the scales dropped with an audible stroke, indicating the loss of weight. The scales were carefully tested, of a dark blue dye termed "Prussian blue," and the body of the first subject through a stronger glass, and then with the aura so distinct as a nebulous haze surrounding the body. After the glass was removed the haze was then accommodated to the keener sight of the visitors, the luminous glow was merely to establish the fact that the aura was not a trick of vision. Twelve prominent Chicago physicians and scientists of the Henry hospital witnessed the trials. Most of them said the demonstration was a complete success, and they saw distinctly the bands of light encircling the body and the subtle haze that appeared to pass from the human form.

Like MacDougall, the Chicago physician watched the last moments of a human being. Suddenly there arose from the sufferer, a patient in Mercy hospital, was plainly outlined with its dark etheric double and its vaporous human form. Then there arose from the body a cloud of light, a mist of its own making, and a cloud different in many ways from that of the gross country. As the physician and his colleagues looked on the patient's body began to fade as a whole.

Although it is composed of trees, the forest is far more than a collection of trees standing in close quarters. It has a population of animals and plants peculiar to itself, a soil largely of its own making, and a climate different in many ways from that of the open country. Its underbrush and its streams alone makes farming possible by many accounting and methods, but he is firm in stating his belief that the forest is necessary to the preservation of the streams of life, and lumber, the raw material of railroads, of telegraph poles, and all the great achievements of material progress, would soon be gone if other long delayed or wisely imposed.

The forest is as beautiful as it is useful. It is a living thing, as Muir spoke of it as a terrible place are the forests of the world, and the man who knows the forest without feeling the gentle influence of one of the holiest and strongest parts of nature from every part of the world, is one of the most helpful friends of man. Perhaps no other natural agent has done so much to make our country what it is, and nothing needs more and more constant care.

Winged Seeds: 1, Basswood; 2, Box elder; 3, Elm; 4, Fir; 5 to 8, Pine.

In the absence of the forest, Trees with heavy seeds, live oaks, the chestnut and the walnut, are often only in their own neighborhood, except when they stand on some river banks, on the banks of streams, or when birds and squirrels carry the nuts and acorns to distant places.

With light, winged seeds like the poplars, birches, and pines, the area of spread is greatly increased. Trees with light, winged seeds like the poplars, birches, and pines, have a great advantage over the others, because they can drop their seeds a long way off. The wind is the means by which seed is brought about, and the dissemination of the seeds themselves is often a very curious and interesting.

Only a Moose.

"The modern woman isn't a bird," asserted Rea, Goldbug looking up from her newspaper. "This suffrage movement has more in it than many persons have imagined. It has wide and fearless. Here is a story of a woman up in Canada who killed a moose. It seems that she—"

"Interjected Mr. Goldbug. "There must be some mistake about that, my dear."

Mrs. Goldbuilt searched out the paragraph and then looked up. "Give stupid of me," she exclaimed, "I see that I misread it. It was a moose she killed—Nothing but a moose."

Pictures That Please.

Every one in a while you read about some picture or picture frame that sends of dollars, but you can secure a beautiful reproduction of some of the world's masterpieces, ready for framing, absolutely free, by sending the Hewitt Brothers' Soap Company, Dayton, Ohio, a two-cent stamp and the name of this illustrious friends.

Not All Smoked.

L. White Dunbey, secretary to former Speaker Cannon, was telling of that the speaker did not smoke so much as people thought he did.

"My understanding," suggested one of the party, "is that he gets away with about 20 cigars a day."

"Oh, well," replied Dunbey, "but he eats half of 'em."—Sunday Magazine.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for Infants and children, and see that it Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Play It or Raise It!

A German composer has written an allcensant piece of music called "Hell." There will be a big run on it among of people in this country able to play it at a glance.—Houston Post.

The Pure Food Law stopped the sale of hundreds of fraudulent medicines. They would not have stopped Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds if it had not stood the test of investigation and proved its merit.

If a man smokes in the house and his wife is afraid of fire, he ought to be relieved; he should be obliged to take them down.

Sunshine is worth more than gold, when it is real sunshine and not fire.

Thompson's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

It's one kind of tough luck to strike oil when boring for water.

W. L. DOUGLAS

$2.50, $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 SHOES

WOMEN wear W.L.Douglas stylish, perfect fitting, easy walking boots, because they give the best value for the money.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS

The workmanship which has made W.L. Douglas shoes famous for over a quarter of a century is maintained in every pair.

If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W.L.Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are waranted to hold their shape, fit better and wear longer than any other make for the price.

The genuine have W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on bottom.

If your dealer cannot supply you, we can. Sold by mail direct from factory to wearer. Catalog free.

W. L. DOUGLAS, 148 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

The Ring and the Man

MANY BENEFITS ARE DERIVED FROM MUCH ABUSED FOREST

From Every Point of View it Is One of the Most Helpful Friends of Man—Its Influence Upon Streams Alone Makes Farming Possible in Many Re-gions—Other Advantages.

By GIFFORD PINCHOT.

The object of forestry is to discover and apply the principles according to which forests are best managed—that is distinct from arboriculture, which deals with individual trees.

Forestry has to do with such simple things as growing together on some large area whose principal crop is trees, and which therefore forms part of a forest. The forest is the most highly organized portion of the vegetable world. It takes its impress from the individual trees which help to form it that from the multitude which belong to it as a whole.

Although it is composed of trees, the forest is far more than a collection of trees standing in close quarters. It has a population of animals and plants peculiar to itself, a soil largely of its own making, and a climate different in many ways from that of the open country. Its underbrush and its streams alone makes farming possible by many accounting and methods, but he is firm in stating his belief that the forest is necessary to the preservation of the streams of life, and lumber, the raw material of railroads, of telegraph poles, and all the great achievements of material progress, would soon be gone if other long delayed or wisely imposed.

The forest is as beautiful as it is useful. It is a living thing, as Muir spoke of it as a terrible place are the forests of the world, and the man who knows the forest without feeling the gentle influence of one of the holiest and strongest parts of nature from every part of the world, is one of the most helpful friends of man. Perhaps no other natural agent has done so much to make our country what it is, and nothing needs more and more constant care.

Winged Seeds: 1, Basswood; 2, Box elder; 3, Elm; 4, Fir; 5 to 8, Pine.

In the absence of the forest, Trees with heavy seeds, live oaks, the chestnut and the walnut, are often only in their own neighborhood, except when they stand on some river banks, on the banks of streams, or when birds and squirrels carry the nuts and acorns to distant places.

With light, winged seeds like the poplars, birches, and pines, the area of spread is greatly increased. Trees with light, winged seeds like the poplars, birches, and pines, have a great advantage over the others, because they can drop their seeds a long way off. The wind is the means by which seed is brought about, and the dissemination of the seeds themselves is often a very curious and interesting.

Only a Moose.

"The modern woman isn't a bird," asserted Rea, Goldbug looking up from her newspaper. "This suffrage movement has more in it than many persons have imagined. It has wide and fearless. Here is a story of a woman up in Canada who killed a moose. It seems that she—"

"Interjected Mr. Goldbug. "There must be some mistake about that, my dear."

Mrs. Goldbuilt searched out the paragraph and then looked up. "Give stupid of me," she exclaimed, "I see that I misread it. It was a she moose she killed—Nothing but a moose."

Pictures That Please.

Every one in a while you read about some picture or picture frame that sends of dollars, but you can secure a beautiful reproduction of some of the world's masterpieces, ready for framing, absolutely free, by sending the Hewitt Brothers' Soap Company, Dayton, Ohio, a two-cent stamp and the name of this illustrious friends.

Not All Smoked.

L. White Dunbey, secretary to former Speaker Cannon, was telling of that the speaker did not smoke so much as people thought he did.

"My understanding," suggested one of the party, "is that he gets away with about 20 cigars a day."

"Oh, well," replied Dunbey, "but he eats half of 'em."—Sunday Magazine.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for Infants and children, and see that it Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Play It or Raise It!

A German composer has written an allcensant piece of music called "Hell." There will be a big run on it among of people in this country able to play it at a glance.—Houston Post.

The Pure Food Law stopped the sale of hundreds of fraudulent medicines. They would not have stopped Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds if it had not stood the test of investigation and proved its merit.

If a man smokes in the house and his wife is afraid of fire, he ought to be relieved; he should be obliged to take them down.

Sunshine is worth more than gold, when it is real sunshine and not fire.

Thompson's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

It's one kind of tough luck to strike oil when boring for water.

W. L. DOUGLAS

$2.50, $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 SHOES

WOMEN wear W.L.Douglas stylish, perfect fitting, easy walking boots, because they give the best value for the money.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS

The workmanship which has made W.L. Douglas shoes famous for over a quarter of a century is maintained in every pair.

If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W.L.Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are waranted to hold their shape, fit better and wear longer than any other make for the price.

The genuine have W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on bottom.

If your dealer cannot supply you, we can. Sold by mail direct from factory to wearer. Catalog free.

W. L. DOUGLAS, 148 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

TO FERTILIZE YOUNG PLANTS

Liquid Manure, Usually Wasted, Contains All Elements of Commercial Value.

Without Odor.

BY W. MILTON KELLY.

We frequently hear the statement of the relative merits of "liquid and solid manure," and also the assertion that liquid manure is worth more than the latter, because the fact that it promotes more rapid growth than the latter does when used on solid manure.

On the other hand it is claimed by a number of eminent authorities that the solid manure is the best on account of its lasting lasting by supplying humus, or garnish, to the soil, which retains moisture and also improves the texture.

We believe that the best and most satisfactory results are made when both liquid and solid manure are used, the same relative proportions as when used alone.

According to our best informed men in soil culture and fertilizers, liquid manure contains approximately the same amount of fertilizing material as solid manure, but the latter contains elements present in the liquid portion in condition to become available more quickly ready for the growing plant.

The liquid portion of manure which is usually wasted, is rather rich in all those elements which are most immediately ready for the growing plant.

It seems to be a yet fancy with many farmers that commercial fertilizer will make quicker growth when used in fertilizing plants than ordinary barnyard manure on account of the solid materials in the latter for plants to feed upon.

The above claim may be right to a certain extent if the best quality of commercial fertilizer is used on one plot and barnyard manure on another.

But when we speak of results we mean permanent manure we must consider the fact that it is not as valuable as when it is fresh, and contains the full amount of plant food which was originally contained at the time it was made.

ARTIFICIAL MOTHER FOR PIGS

The illustration shows an artificial mother as arranged by Engineer Herbert Hoover, Mr. Bert Crook, Broughton Road, Kensington, by whom it was designed and made. The mother sow died the day after giving birth to the litter, which have been successfully reared on new milk (diluted). They were 21 days old when photographed. The apparatus consists of ordinary sow's teats fixed through a board, and connected by rubber tubes to a can of milk behind.

TEACH SCIENCE TO FARM BOYS

One Excellent Method of Curing Diseased Potatoes.

Sweet was the lass, low was the gas; it was the evening she expected him to put across the big question.

He did not look well. Something seemed to be troubling him. He tried to say something, but the words stuck in his throat, and the girl, noticing this, turned the gas even lower.

Suddenly he turned to her and cried, "I'm a dub!"

"No," she said, fondly. "You don't appreciate yourself as well as some others do, perhaps. Tee hee!"

"Yes," he persisted stubbornly, "I'm a dub!"

"No," she maintained.

"Yes," he almost shouted. "I'm a dub!"

She was a sensible girl, and so, realizing that he ought to know best, she thanked him kindly for warning her in time and handed him his hat. It was only after the door slammed behind him forever that she realized she was awful truth.

He had contracted a nasty cold, and what he had been trying to say was, "I'm in love."

HANDS BURNED LIKE FIRE

"I can truthfully say Cuticura Remedies have given me relief after long years of eczema. About four years ago I noticed some little pimples coming on my little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. I would take them in water for a long time, but the sores broke out more and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all kinds of remedies I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching.

"After hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased the outfit, and after using them three days my hands were entirely healed. My hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Alma Sterrett, R. F. D. 3, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Only a Moose.

"The modern woman isn't a bird," asserted Rea, Goldbug looking up from her newspaper. "This suffrage movement has more in it than many persons have imagined. It has wide and fearless. Here is a story of a woman up in Canada who killed a moose. It seems that she—"

"Interjected Mr. Goldbug. "There must be some mistake about that, my dear."

Mrs. Goldbuilt searched out the paragraph and then looked up. "Give stupid of me," she exclaimed, "I see that I misread it. It was a she moose she killed—Nothing but a moose."

Pictures That Please.

Every one in a while you read about some picture or picture frame that sends of dollars, but you can secure a beautiful reproduction of some of the world's masterpieces, ready for framing, absolutely free, by sending the Hewitt Brothers' Soap Company, Dayton, Ohio, a two-cent stamp and the name of this illustrious friends.

Not All Smoked.

L. White Dunbey, secretary to former Speaker Cannon, was telling of that the speaker did not smoke so much as people thought he did.

"My understanding," suggested one of the party, "is that he gets away with about 20 cigars a day."

"Oh, well," replied Dunbey, "but he eats half of 'em."—Sunday Magazine.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for Infants and children, and see that it Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Play It or Raise It!

A German composer has written an allcensant piece of music called "Hell." There will be a big run on it among of people in this country able to play it at a glance.—Houston Post.

The Pure Food Law stopped the sale of hundreds of fraudulent medicines. They would not have stopped Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds if it had not stood the test of investigation and proved its merit.

If a man smokes in the house and his wife is afraid of fire, he ought to be relieved; he should be obliged to take them down.

Sunshine is worth more than gold, when it is real sunshine and not fire.

Thompson's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

It's one kind of tough luck to strike oil when boring for water.

W. L. DOUGLAS

$2.50, $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 SHOES

WOMEN wear W.L.Douglas stylish, perfect fitting, easy walking boots, because they give the best value for the money.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS

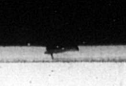
The workmanship which has made W.L. Douglas shoes famous for over a quarter of a century is maintained in every pair.

If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W.L.Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are waranted to hold their shape, fit better and wear longer than any other make for the price.

The genuine have W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on bottom.

If your dealer cannot supply you, we can. Sold by mail direct from factory to wearer. Catalog free.

W. L. DOUGLAS, 148 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.



Cement Talk No. 7

Newspapers print nearly every day the story of some fire disaster involving the complete destruction of great property values and sometimes the loss of human lives. The annual fire losses of the United States are measured by the millions; in fact, it is stated that over two hundred and fifty million dollars worth of property was wiped out by fire in the United States last year. What is wanted is that the precautions to prevent fire and its consequences, as for instance, the high heats in kilns, ovens, drying and building construction. Experience has proved that reinforced concrete is both positive and economical. In some industries fireproof building is compelled by law. Reinforced concrete has come to the front as the most satisfactory agent in building against fire. The use of cement in building is becoming more and more common, and for its strength, durability and economy. Whether the building is coming on any little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. I would take them in water for a long time, but the sores broke out more and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all kinds of remedies I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching.

"After hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased the outfit, and after using them three days my hands were entirely healed. My hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Alma Sterrett, R. F. D. 3, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Only a Moose.

"The modern woman isn't a bird," asserted Rea, Goldbug looking up from her newspaper. "This suffrage movement has more in it than many persons have imagined. It has wide and fearless. Here is a story of a woman up in Canada who killed a moose. It seems that she—"

"Interjected Mr. Goldbug. "There must be some mistake about that, my dear."

Mrs. Goldbuilt searched out the paragraph and then looked up. "Give stupid of me," she exclaimed, "I see that I misread it. It was a she moose she killed—Nothing but a moose."

Pictures That Please.

Every one in a while you read about some picture or picture frame that sends of dollars, but you can secure a beautiful reproduction of some of the world's masterpieces, ready for framing, absolutely free, by sending the Hewitt Brothers' Soap Company, Dayton, Ohio, a two-cent stamp and the name of this illustrious friends.

Not All Smoked.

L. White Dunbey, secretary to former Speaker Cannon, was telling of that the speaker did not sm