Show us a boy who obeys his parents, who has respect for age, who always has a friendly disposition, and who applies himself diligently to get wisdom and to do good toward others, and (like) is not respected and beloved, then there is no such thing as truth in the world. Remember this, boys, and you will be respected by others, and grow up and become useful men.

Days of Rest For Horses

A business concern in Baltimore which buys only the best stock for its draft horses, gives each horse a day of rest every week in addition to Sunday. The firm is convinced by experience that this practice increases the working quantity of the horses on days when they are in service and lessens veterinary expenses.

An exchange says that a new kind of social amusement has been invented. It is called an "avoirdupois party." All the girls are weighed and the weight of each written on a piece of paper and put into a hat, and the young men must draw. The young man must go to supper with the girl whose weight he draws, and must pay for her supper at one-half cent per pound. It is very exciting so far as the young men are concerned.

Whereas, on Thursday, Sept. 14th, 1911, it was the will of the all-wise Father, to call to his eternal home Bro. Peter Thomas by loss, and youngest member of our W. C. T. U.

Resolved, I. That we most earnestly commend this act as worthy of imitation, also his faithfulness in home life and Sunday School.

Tennessee Jerseys and Breeders

It would take only a glimpse into the stock ring at the Tennessee State Fair to convince the most skeptical, that Tennessee is surely the Jersey center of America.

Tennessee Jerseys have long been recognized as the richest and best, and there Tennessee bred cows are much sought by the greatest breeders.

Among the veterans in the Jersey business, to whom most of the credit is due, for placing Jerseys where they now are deservedly stand, are Tennesseans. Some of those veterans have pioneered the last mile, and added to them we owe profound gratitude, and it is our greatest desire that we, the younger generation who are now striving, may only add lustre to the brilliant achievements of our predecessors and keep Tennessee foremost in all "Jerseydom."—[Home Journal.

Farmers are not accustomed to count the cost of keeping a few idle horses around for weeks or even months. Many would be surprised to find what a horse's board bill amounts to even on light grain feed, although it would not be so serious on a farm as in this instance of dissected city horses. There were fifteen aged horses which the city of Chicago no longer needed in the municipal business, so according to law they were advertised for sixty days and the bids then were opened. On a bases of actual cost of feed and care the expense to the city during the two months has been about $300 and if the $20 for advertising, and the cost of the special council meeting to act on the sale and the time of various city employes were figured in the cost of selling these horses would doubt-less exceed $400. When the bids were opened the highest offer for the entire lot was just $400. It was a cheap lot of horses but it was no cheap job getting rid of them.—[Ex.

Bath County

Bath county was organized in 1811, and is situated in the eastern part of the State, and lies on Licking river. It is bounded on the north and east by Fleming, south by Morgan, and west by Montgomery. It received its name from the great number of medicinal springs which abound in the county, the celebrated Olympian or Mud Lick Springs are situated here, which contain a variety of waters, such as sulphuric and red sulphur, and chalybeate of iron. Two other well of these waters abound in the White Sulphur.

Lands reported for the county in 1815, 256,281 acres; average value per acre $6.23; total valuation of taxable property, $1,596,-855. White males over twenty-one years old, 1,776; children between five and sixteen years old, 2,420. Population in 1830, 9,799 in 1840, 9,705.

Licking river washes the entire north-east boundary of this county, and it is watered by several fine streams flowing through various parts of it. The surface is diversified, hilly, undulating, and fine. The soil north and west of Slate creek is rich and fertile, being based upon limestone; south and east the county abounds in iron and coal, and the soil is not so good. Immediately around Sharpsburg, for several miles, the surface is gently undulating and the lands highly cultivated, rich, and very productive. The principal articles of production and commerce are cattle, horses, hogs, corn, and wheat. There are two iron furnaces and one forge in the county, manufacturing about two thousand tons of iron per year. The towns of this county are Owingsville, Sharpsburg, Wyoming, and Bethel. Owingsville is the seat of justice, and contains two churches, two taverns, a fine court house, post office five stores and grocering, three doctors, seven lawyers, two schools, one blacksmith shop, one tailor, one saddler, etc. Incorporated in 1828, and named in honor of Col. Thomas Pre Owings. Population about 600.

Sharpsburg is situated on the Mays ville and Mount Sterling turnpike North 18 miles, and nine from the former and twelve miles from the latter place, and twelve miles west of Owingsville. It contains three churches, one tavern, four stores, six doctors, one saw mills, one banging factory, one male and one female school, two wool factories and ten mechanical shops. Established in 1826, and named for Moses Sharp.

Wyoming, a small village at the mouth of Slate creek, contains about ten taverns, two cabinet shops, one black-smith shop, two grist and saw mills.

Bethel, a small village on the main road from Owingsville to Mount Sterling, contains a post office, store one doctor, one saddler's shops, blacksmith and hat shops—thirty inhabitants.

The above history of our county as it appears in Collins' History of Kentucky, edition of 1847. As the centennial celebration of the establishment of this county is approaching, we thought this sketch would prove interesting. Those of the present day, can trace back from their native village to their forefathers who came to this county in the days of the pioneers, and have brought.—[Bath County World.
