SYNOPSIS.

A football winning quarterback, Haldane, engaged to Miss Elsie Stewart, is suddenly confronted by a woman who claims to be his wife, but who disappears before he can question her. Haldane, in his fine self confidence, at first won't worry, but soon he does. Then he tries to find the woman, but she has gone. Later she comes to him, and he learns that she is the wife of Jack Gormly, a prize fighter, who has been in prison for three years. Gormly is released, and Haldane, who has become a power in the Gotham Freight Traction company, is asked to help him get a job. Haldane is willing to do anything he can for the woman who has been so unfortunate as to marry Gormly, but he is afraid to have Gormly in the employ of the company. Gormly, however, is given a job as a motorman, and Haldane, who has become a power in the Gotham Freight Traction company and an authority on traction matters, is asked to help Gormly when he runs for alderman. Haldane refuses, but Gormly is elected. Haldane, who has become interested in Miss Elsie Stewart, the fine self confident daughter of Freight Traction magnate Stewart, and who has been engaged to her for some time, is asked by Gormly to help him get a franchise for a new traction company
