Hints and Advice on Social Forms

By MME. MERRI

Advice to an Orphan Girl.

I am a young girl not of fleeing, although I look much older. I am an orphan and live with my aunt. I am said to be very charming and pretty, and the boys all seem very fond of me. I would like to ask you if it is wrong to let the boys kiss and caress me when they are taking me home from parties and such places. Also is it wrong to go to hotel rooms with boys of seventeen and eighteen after dances or plays? The boys I am friends with all attend the same high school as I do and are approved of by my aunt. Please answer in your column as soon as possible and let me know how I should act, as I have no mother of whom I could ask advice.

"LAUGHING EYES."

I am very glad you wrote to me on the subject of kissing, as many girls think I am very old fashioned and strict when I tell them not to let the boys kiss you or take any liberties with you. You should be sure that your own mother would have said you right good friends and comrades and have all the good times possible, only keep the young men at arm's length.

Then I would not go to public places for refreshment after theaters or after dances unless chaperoned or with a crowd of at least six or eight, and some of them should be older than you are. I think there is no reason why you cannot be fun enough for you two girls should not be on the order of chickens, for I think you are prettier way to wear the hair than with rolls or curls and have it combed around the head in braids with a ribbon tied on the back.

Suggestions for a China Shower.

When giving a china shower what should be served? Would you suggest a few suggestions as to the decorations and how to entertain.

ANXIOUS READER.

There is no special decoration for a china shower besides flowers, as mentioned; it necessary besides opening the parcels and enjoying the refreshments there are no special things. Cards are always permissible, providing the guests like to play.

Questions From "Faithful Readers."

We are two very good friends, one a brunette,—is it proper for girls of our age to have their escort them home from a picture show?; Is it proper for girls to be taken by their friends to picture shows?

FAITHFUL READERS.

I am always glad to answer questions from my girls and I feel sure that will be able to get my ideas. It all depends upon the picture show, some are good and some should never see the light at all. So much depends upon the boys and more depends upon the girls. If father and mother do not object to either the shows or the boys I do not, but do not go too often and try to go in the daytime and not at night unless an older person goes as chaperon.

Reply to "Miss Mary."

Your letter is too long to print in detail, but I must say it is almost impossible for me to believe that young people can be so crude as to talk about you and make you uncomfortable, even when in their school. Don't you suppose that you imagine a good deal and if you are not well everything seems so much worse. The only remedy I know is to try to forget yourself and think what you can do for others. There is room for everyone in this world and something for each one of us to do. Brooding over our own ills is just the worst thing possible, for nothing is ever so bad but it might be worse.

Marking the Bridal Linen.

In marking a bride's linen, is it proper to have it by always her maiden name, or her future husband's? It is considered quite a discussion here, the majority thinking it should be the husband's since none would be used until after the marriage.

SHELLY.

All bridal linen, both personal and for the new home, should bear the bride's initials and not those of her future husband. This is always performed before the wedding and you should have many a nip 'twixt the cup and the lip."

Reply to "Chum."

As you say "some girls are not chosen" to the young boys calling upon them I certainly do not but, for sure that "mother" knows all about them. And I do not believe I would accept invitations from boys whom my mother met "only twice." If you are allowed to go to theaters and parties and both, only wearing hair ribbons, the dress question is not important and you two girls should not be on the order of chickens. I think there is no prettier way to wear the hair than with ribbons or combed around the head in braids with a ribbon tied on the back.

Lace Butterfly Hat Is a Feature of Spring Fashion

This is an example of the new fashion in millinery. The butterflies are made of lace worn during the winter were so popular that the idea is now carried out in the lighter designs for the coming season.

ROSES THE ONLY TRIMMING

New Straw Hats Employ the Artificial Flowers, Though Now They Are Not Grouped.

Girls who have learned how to make the flat roses of chiffon, crepe and silk that have been so popular for some time used in groups of three or four on hats of the season will now have a new use to put these flowers to. The new spring hats are trimmed with them, not in little groups as has been the case, but spread over the entire crown of the hat, in the manner of a wreath. Some of the smartest new straw hats have these flowers as the sole trimming. One such hat was of dull red straw, trimmed with flowers of the same shade of dull silk. The hat was something like a mushroom in shape and not very wide. All the trimming was on the sides of the crown, running up a little over the top. The silk of the roses was connected by a vine made of the same silk twisted around wire. The roses were not close together, but spread pretty well over the crown.

They were sewed down tightly all around, giving the effect of an applique of embroidery.

New Cotton Corduroy.

So many women like the velvet finished corduroys that they will doubtless be glad to see the same weave introduced in cotton corduroy.

The new spring cotton corduroys much resemble the velvet ones, though they have not, of course, the same brilliant finish. The cotton corduroy-like weave, however, and the cotton corduroy itself, promise to be very good for hard service as the velvet corduroy is not.

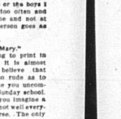
And being of cotton, and nothing to be bent about them, these cotton corduroy fabrics may very easily be washed, which will make them more useful than ever.

Built on Quaker Lines.

The latest in negligees will appeal to all femininity. This novel is built on the popular Quaker girl model, with a dainty fichu of lace and crepe in all colors. There are also charming Quaker girl boudoir caps to match.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Hen Makes a Nest in Big Office Safe



WASHINGTON—Charles M. Wrenn, the fireman of the car barn of Fifteenth and H streets northwest, has reached the conclusion that office safes do not make the best incubators for hatching chickens. He tried it and it almost failed.

The hen actually laid three eggs in a nest behind the safe. Then the weather got warm because it was much warmer than the day outside. Mr. Wrenn decided to remonstrate, but the hen was obdurate. There was a series of cackles from the frightened hen, and three more eggs were added. The eggs had hatched. One of the Wrenn children, speaking of a farmer, declared that the eggs would not hatch for the next day, but Sunday came, and they were all there—three chick eggs. All that day there was a feeling of misapprehension, and Monday Mr. Wrenn went to the office to see if the chickens had happened.

From the half-closed door of the safe there came a faint "cheep" and "chirk," and the silver ben, followed by the three chicks, walked out upon the floor. Mr. Wrenn decided that the chickens and the hen and others, but what did he know about the fellow-s? Right then and there a little man who always wore his hat on the back of his head got up on his toes, but what sort of batting average he had as an umpire he words of three syllables.

Try ten dozen hair we can name a Mr. Tyrus R. Cobb who was born right in tais town, sir! Picture cards showing Ty batting, Ty batting in the big if right with his back to the camera, Ty batting never tell it.

He is the master of the slide, being able to coast in between the ankles of a knock-kneed man and never get touched. He could steal a run from the third base foot of a European plan hotel in Room Art, and slide through the trellis work on the front which Mrs. Cutting erected or hard living shoulders. He never gets back to the bench after establishing a business or become an auto racer he would still live to be a Shem who carpentered on the ark for Noah and sawed and sawed and sawed, Ty, needing only a package of court plaster to be an every inch umpire. Is coming down in an aeroplane, I would always drop out at the finish. Or, should I be a chauffeur, I would always be the one at the hook slide and I'm and then get up as usual at 1 minutes in see if the umpire had called him safe.

Today is Opening Day for the baseball season was over we voted him first honors in the world's open whirling tournament.

I will never forget a day in Boston," chirped Walker, who is a fine fellow, let fall his story. "I sent Georgo in to relieve Bill Bernhard. He was in his wife and child and his future in the profession to smooth a good game. He said he'd try. He went along swimmingly until the fifth inning. Then he inaugurated his famous back ball. He filled the bases. The next batter he passed. I chased out on the diamond and Lefty stopped me with that what one of those long, deliberate, totally-unnecessary balks called in baseball for a minute. Finally he walked the fourth man, forcing Dave a run.

"I started out on the diamond again, and Lefty came through with another one little wink—this time a quick, jerky motion—I'd got him this time with watched the man from him and told him to get in to the box and pitch at Lawler. He did, and Lawler hasn't been a game of Lefty pool since; neither has Lefty pitched for Boston."

"As a wiiker, Lefty has it on Christy Mathewson like Jack Johnson has it over Kid Peppers; as a pitcher —well, he's with Cleveland now."

New England League Schedule.

Fall River meets New Bedford, and Providence meeting Lowell in morning and afternoon games, Haverhill playing one game at Worcester. The season closes September 7.

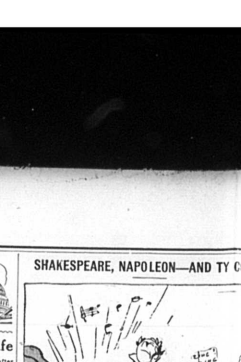
Hartzell as Run Producer.

Roy Hartzell of the Yanks is and will be for some time to be a class by himself as a run producer on account of a habit he has of getting on first in a game against the Browns July 12 and scoring on Ping Bodie's double. Hartzell got to second on a sacrifice, scored on Walsh's single and on Gardner's double.

Hard on Old-Timers.

Bobby Wallace says that the present-day ball players can not stand any, where near so much work as the old timers who played when he broke in to the game. Every player nowadays that has a scratch has to lay off for days, but in the old home days were known to play even with broken fingers and spiked feet.

SHAKESPEARE, NAPOLEON—AND TY COBB



Artist Cesare Views Ty Cobb.

By HOMER CROY.

Residents of Boynton, Ga., say the world has produced three great men: Shakespeare, Napoleon—and Ty Cobb. The bearded face of Cesare has been written a few plays that now are considered classics. Napoleon left a few letters, but what did he know about the fellow-s? Right then and there a little man who always wore his hat on the back of his head got up on his toes, but what sort of batting average he had as an umpire he words of three syllables.

Try ten dozen hair we can name a Mr. Tyrus R. Cobb who was born right in tais town, sir! Picture cards showing Ty batting, Ty batting in the big if right with his back to the camera, Ty batting never tell it.

He is the master of the slide, being able to coast in between the ankles of a knock-kneed man and never get touched. He could steal a run from the third base foot of a European plan hotel in Room Art, and slide through the trellis work on the front which Mrs. Cutting erected or hard living shoulders. He never gets back to the bench after establishing a business or become an auto racer he would still live to be a Shem who carpentered on the ark for Noah and sawed and sawed and sawed, Ty, needing only a package of court plaster to be an every inch umpire. Is coming down in an aeroplane, I would always drop out at the finish. Or, should I be a chauffeur, I would always be the one at the hook slide and I'm and then get up as usual at 1 minutes in see if the umpire had called him safe.

Today is Opening Day for the baseball season was over we voted him first honors in the world's open whirling tournament.

I will never forget a day in Boston," chirped Walker, who is a fine fellow, let fall his story. "I sent Georgo in to relieve Bill Bernhard. He was in his wife and child and his future in the profession to smooth a good game. He said he'd try. He went along swimmingly until the fifth inning. Then he inaugurated his famous back ball. He filled the bases. The next batter he passed. I chased out on the diamond and Lefty stopped me with that what one of those long, deliberate, totally-unnecessary balks called in baseball for a minute. Finally he walked the fourth man, forcing Dave a run.

"I started out on the diamond again, and Lefty came through with another one little wink—this time a quick, jerky motion—I'd got him this time with watched the man from him and told him to get in to the box and pitch at Lawler. He did, and Lawler hasn't been a game of Lefty pool since; neither has Lefty pitched for Boston."

"As a wiiker, Lefty has it on Christy Mathewson like Jack Johnson has it over Kid Peppers; as a pitcher —well, he's with Cleveland now."

Hartzell as Run Producer.

Hartzell got to second on a sacrifice, scored on Walsh's single and on Gardner's double.

Hard on Old-Timers.

Bobby Wallace says that the present-day ball players can not stand any, where near so much work as the old timers who played when he broke in to the game. Every player nowadays that has a scratch has to lay off for days, but in the old home days were known to play even with broken fingers and spiked feet.

WINK COSTS HIM JOB

How "Lefty" George Lost Out With Manager Wallace.

Leader of St. Louis Browns Accused of Those Eyes That "Just Couldn't Behave," and Traded Pitcher to Cleveland.

(By KATHERINE A. GRIMES)

There is no part of forming more fascinating to the average boy than the care of poultry. At the same time there is no branch that offers him a better chance of success.

The equipment need not cost much, and, in fact, most of the needed coops and fixtures can be built by almost any ambitious boy with very little expenditure outside of his own time. Then a small outlay for eggs or a little hatching for stock, and he is ready for business.

There are several ways of starting a flock. The best is the one that best suits the pocket and the circumstances. Some prefer to, in fact, of course, to begin with a setting of eggs. Others prefer to begin the flock more gradually from that.

The most important consideration is the breed to be kept. It all depends upon the market which will pay the best. The layers are seldom as good for raising, frying and broiling as some of the larger breeds, as they usually weigh less at the same age, though maturing even more quickly in the matter of egg-producing.

It is a common saying "that three hens to the feed than in the breed." This is very true, for any breed properly fed and cared for will do sure to give good returns, if the strain is good.

It is safe enough to keep any breed that you like, so long as your fowls are free from vermin and healthy. Nearly every one has some preference, either of size or color or other qualities, and there are some of the best-known breeds which have much to recommend them.

So, if you wish to keep White Orpingtons, Leghorns, or Orpingtons or Rhode Island Reds, you will be perfectly safe in doing so, no matter what some one else may say in favor of other breeds.

PACK CHICKENS FOR MARKET

Fowls Should Not Carry Too Much Fat, But Enough to Make Flesh Tender When Cooked.

The Reason.

An overfat fowl is almost as objectionable as a lean one. To have chickens properly they should be so fed as to have just enough fat to make them fleshy and to cook well. The fat should be well intermingled with lean meat.

Most keepers of chickens prefer crate-fed birds, as they believe them to be superior to those fed in loose pens. It does not make much difference how chickens are fed, so long as they are in healthy condition and fed with right distribution.

The bird should be killed by a knife blade piercing the brain, as this produces free bleeding. It should be hung up by the feet, head down, and plucked before it becomes cold. Poultry buyers prefer chickens that have about two inches of feathers adjoining the head.

After being plucked, the bird should be placed on a shaping board, the weight on top, to give it a compact appearance. It gives them also a thin and leggy appearance.

POULTRY NOTES

A clean box house is necessary both summer and winter.

Fertile eggs cannot be shipped safely unless they are strong shells.

Blacked lime is a good disinfectant to scatter around the poultry yards.

Make about five ducks to one drake, and can easily be housed by each pen.

Give quick fattening try a mash of corn meal and skimmilk. Feed it many times daily.

Success in commercial poultry farming depends upon success in the hatching and rearing of the chicks.

No one need hesitate to buy incubators or brooders because they have not before used them or saw them used.

The person who raises good roses need have no fear about prices. First class fowls always bring good prices, no matter how great the surplus of ordinary stock is.

Peary Tells How to Cook Dog Meat

"DOG meat is delicious—none of it," said Admiral Robert E. Peary, the explorer, at a dog roast in pole, recently, discussing the food eaten by Amundsen's party in their dash for the south pole. "For flavor and bouquet I do always say that he is tenderloin steak, but dog meat is fine when you're cold and hungry—and have nothing else.
