CHIVALRY NOT IN QUESTION

Harold Hemmingweight Has His Own Reason for Wishing to Resign Seat in Street Car.

Out on the road not a soul was to be seen, not a bird was to be heard, but the sun was shining.

Mabel Hunnewike, who had on a "Don't You Forget It" hat, looked better, and felt so much rested by the ride that she was actually bubbling over with happiness.

But Harold Hemmingweight, who had on a "Don't You Forget It" hat, looked worse, and felt so much rested by the ride that he was actually bubbling over with unhappiness.

"Keep your mouth shut," she said, "if you're unable to stimulate conversation by any further remark than 'Gee whiz!' you'd better keep it shut."

"I beg of mercy," he said, and then, again, and many times again, he added, "I beg of mercy."

While pulled him over the dashboard, and severely hurt his head and shoulder, but a right to stand, and I don't believe she cried.

Poor thing.

Well endeavor to—
