MANY EDUCATORS MEET

KENTUCKY EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION HAVE GREAT GATHERING IN LOUISVILLE.

Attendance Is Three Times That of Previous Year—Membership Greatly Increased.

Louisville, Ky.—The annual meeting of the Kentucky Educational Association was held in the First Christian church in this city, the session lasting two days. It was by far the greatest educational gathering ever held in Kentucky and one of the greatest conventions of school people ever held south of the Ohio river. For weeks the association, together with kindred organizations, have been urging a large attendance at this meeting and were rewarded by seeing more than three times as many present there as at their last annual gathering.

The delegates listened to addresses by Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education; Charles T. Young, president of Princeton University; Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn; David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford University, and a great many of the educational notables of their own state.

The Last Day.

Louisville will get the convention of the association every year. Following the vote on the permanent headquarters, a committee composed of R. H. Whitehouse, J. J. Rhodes and H. H. Mosser was appointed to change the constitution and by-laws to conform with the action of the convention.

The association will have three times its membership during the last years according to the report of Secretary Vinson. The membership has reached a total of 3,114. The treasurer, H. H. Magoffin, reported enough money in the treasury to pay the expenses of the meeting and have some left over.

The Foxworth road amendment to the State Constitution, providing for the working of convicts on the public roads, was indorsed unanimously and the association members were instructed to aid in having it put through. In addition to indorsing this amendment a committee composed of Miss Mattie Reed, of Jeffersontown; H. H. Cherry, of Bowling Green, and R. M. Hisbrook, of Morehead, was appointed to aid a committee from the State Tuberculosis Commission in stamping out the white plague.

The Officers.

The John H. McFerran prize of $50 in gold to the county having the largest aggregate attendance at the Local Union county Forty-three teachers attended the meeting, which is a remarkable mileage of 9,417. It was announced that Pendleton county will add a fifth free school teachers, has the largest membership in the association, with 229 teacher belonging to the association.

The following officers were elected for 1912-13 were elected, was attended by a crowd that packed the house to the extinction. Every seat in the gallery and on the main floor was occupied, and many stood in the rear of the auditorium.

R. L. McFarland, superintendent of the Owensboro schools, was elected president. He succeeds Hon. W. D. Hammink, of Clinton county, and J. W. Brooks, of Danville.

Dudley H. Hizzes was elected first vice president; second vice president, Mrs. Stewart declined to run after being nominated.

A. L. Crabbe, of Paducah, was nominated for secretary, and treasurer of the collegiate faction scored by electing Miss Kate R. Middleton, of Lexington. Miss Christian is a graduate of Columbia University, and has done good work in the Lexington schools.

No opposition was shown to the election of Hiram Vinson, of the Washington county, to the office of third vice president.

Thomas W. Vinson, of Frankfort, was elected to the executive committee for the third consecutive three-year term.

Barbridge Hamblett, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, of Frankfort, and H. H. Cherry, Bowling Green, were elected to the executive committee members, has been elected for seven years. Miss Mattie Reed, of Jeffersontown, declined to run after being nominated.

Badge For Mrs. Wilson.

While General Superintendent Giffford was presiding, the association voted to give Mrs. Wilson a diamond badge in appreciation of her work during the year. The motion was made by Superintendent T. J. Coale, former president of the association.

The first address of the morning was delivered by F. C. Dutton, of Frankfort. He reviewed the present condition of rural schools and detailed his plans for the future.

The teaching of social ethics by the teachers was the topic of a talk by Dr. Elizabeth Campbell, of Cincinnati, O. She discussed the family life of the average American, speaking of it as the greatest gift of civilization and river for the purpose of improvement.

Saved From Death in Old Shaft

A most remarkable escape from death was that of a young girl who was rescued the other day, from an abandoned shaft about 50 feet deep close to the Kilgorelle (West Australia) race course. Two prospectors, who were visiting the shaft with the object of constructing operations, heard the faint echo of a human voice from below, and immediately sent for the police. The children was then quickly moved over the shaft, and a bucket lowered on a rope, finding the child in the bottom. Asked how she got there, she replied that she had fallen away from some boys who previously she had spoken to, and while looking back at them had fallen into the shaft. She had not been wounded for ten days; and the prospectors had kindly provided her with food.

Health & Beauty Hints

By Katherine Morton

Girls of sixteen and even younger often write me for complexion formulas and I always feel like saying the same thing to them all:

"Dear children, you have it in your own hands to possess not only a good, but very likely a beautiful, complexion."

Now let us consider the complexion defects which afflict so many girls between the ages of twelve and eighteen. Pimples, coarse skin, large pores are the chiefest ones and these are largely due to the wrong kind of eating habits. The proof of the statement is that girls who eat candy, pastry, cakes, puddings and pies are warned by their mothers that they will surely spoil their complexions, and rarely have them. Left to their own devices, however, they keep their skin with complexion worries take negative form of a warning. The consequence of the diet bath, been lazy about exercise, indulged in candy and sexaged foods, have drunk too much tea and coffee, and the same here this week, the other being to Detroit where he was called, who exploded a dynamite cap with a hatchet and lost an eye and sustained bad cuts to his face and hands.

Paigecira and Baudoir Caps.

Paigecira and baudoir caps for this season is a very elaborate creation indeed. The frill of lace that is to daintily finish it from the orthodox evening dress except for the absence of white tulle, for the pelgeoir is generally a rather heavy affair, sometimes quite too appropriate for the five o'clock tea ceremonies.

Although some women have elected to return to the old-time slightness, the majority of the fashionable world is much changed of late, and the boudoir cap is quite a fascinating fetish to the coiffige costume.

Needle Work Bit.

A little piece of needle work that is a comfort to embroiderers can finish in a couple of hours or so is in lines of fat bow shape stamped around the edge for scalloping and at each side the center for two big eyelets. The ribbon that falls below this place is also stamped for scalloping and with a small pattern on the end. The eyelets are to be threaded with a velvet ribbon bow.

Social Forms and Entertainments

By Katherine Morton

I Am going to entertain a young lady friend who has given me something new to serve—only four things One of the guests will bring a friend whom none of us ever met. Am I supposed to introduce her to the guests or is her hostess? Will you kindly tell me how to pronounce her name? It is pronounced, also "Adele"—Ignorant.

Try this for your menu: It may not be new, but is a happy combination: Bake halves of salted cocoanuts, then creamed sweetbreads and mushrooms, then salad, ices, rolls, cherry sherbet. If you can work in a course for each one of these you're in luck.

Either one of the hostess of the stranger may make the introductions; "Miss Adele, Miss Blank."

Pronounce "Adelaide" this way, "Adel-aid." "Adele" with the first word over the first "e" in "Adelaide," without the mark over the "e" it is generally called "Adell."

Better Not.

How should a boy ask a girl if he may call on her? Also, how old should he ask her if he can kiss her?—Ignorant.

Never, never. Silly boy, ask a girl to kiss you unless you're a man grown and you feel very sure that "silly" is the word a girl who loves you wish to make your wife. Let this be your rule: Do not ask a girl to do anything for you that you would not want your sister to do. Girls are perfectly delightful chums and comrades, but treat them as such. Don't make a habit of the rousing or the blush from the cheek, but treat your girl friends with all the reverence and protection that you would your sister. Good advice to give. Don't kiss, and don't bug. I wish I could write all the capitals in as attract the attention of every boy and girl who reads. It is good enough to read our department.

From "Sunshine."

I have been reading the questions and have noticed many useful answers. Do you think there is harm in two young girl friends of sixteen spending a day at a park in their home neighborhood, without escort? Is there harm in having a gentleman friend or two ask at your home?—Sunshine.

I see no harm in going quietly to the park on the outskirts of the town among girls should, nor in having a man visit you at your home with the permission of your parents. Man are not ogres, and I regret to say that it is often because girls are very reticent about themselves that we are forced to be so. If girls will be natural, that they must act so as to preserve their dignity and refinement, we are all attempting to take any liberties.

Farewell Surprise Party.

I have planned to give a party for a friend who is to move to another city.

There are to be about twelve girls and boys present, and I would like to have the party a surprise.—Topsy.

I feel sure my dear, that with all the suggestions in today's paper that you will find no trouble in the way for your party. All you will have to do is to keep the secret, and that, I fear, is a surprise, so I would give the invitations verbally and ask your guest to get up a jolly present for the going away party. Games could easily be arranged when you ask them.

When to Wear Them.

Is it proper for Nita to be seen so much that I thought I would come to her for advice and let her settle an argument. On what occasions are silk hats worn? Also, is it correct to say that they are to be worn with "dressed up" dresses and not with a street suit. Am I wrong? Please answer this promptly, so I may show your answer to my friend.—Nita.

With most people silk stockings are a question of cost, and not propriety. Your hat may be worn on every occasion, with street suits and boudoir gowns, and with the simplest morning gowns in the kitchen.

MME. MERRI.

Dotted Stockings.

The latest novelty in the hosiery bearing the approval of Paris is stockings dotted in white.

These may easily be done at home, and many who cannot afford to pay the exorbitant price asked for a pair of these pretty garments may enjoy the luxury of owning several pairs.

Embroidery silk is used in the shape upon the instep, pleating the uniform size, carefully following the outside line of the triangle which you have basted on the stocking.

Black stockings are often dotted with white. The dots are embroidered with the black and white silk.

Slips of String Colored Lace.

Among the lovely laces of the season and the dainty robes of the broderie anglaise, there is a novelty that will make a special appeal to those of slender purse. After all a summer wardrobe could have nothing prettier to offer than one of the pretty slips of string-colored Esbernan's net and lace.

HOW WILSON WON BATTLE

FOR PRESIDENT.
WOODROW WILSON
FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.
THOMAS R. MARSHALL

By W. A. PATTERSON.

Convention Hall, Baltimore.—The New Jersey idealist without an ambition for office will tell you that the nomination of he had a ticket, "as all nominations are."

It has been my privilege to attend a few national conventions, including the recent Republican gathering at Chicago, and the meeting of the Democrats at Baltimore, and I can assure you that conventions are very much alike.

Raising his voice so as to be heard above the din, Mr. Bryan stated that two delegates from Nebraska had come to a national convention from Nebraska he would be glad to support any one expected any evidence of displeasure on his part. Not that he was disappointed, for she only emitted a burst of laughter, and as the conclusion of the address applauded with the rest. Then Governor Dix arose amid cheers and said:

"I desire to say again, the vote of New York was cast for Governor Wilson." Mr. Stanchfield: "And so man can be found in New York who has questioned and branded with the mark of Cain Governor Dix's fidelity to the party."

Governor Dix's statement was the signal for a storm of cheers. Mr. Bryan's face lightened, and he arose and bowed his acknowledgments. Delegates from all parts of the hall arose and applauded the speaker's stand. She was the same Norman H. Mack.

Mrs. Taft entered the convention hall just before Temporary Chairman Parker arrived and was escorted to the manent Chairman James. The crowd watched the lady of a land with eagerness interest as she listened to the denunciations of the distinguished husband and the arraignment of the predatory interests embodied in the speech of the temporary chairman. But if they expected any evidence of displeasure on her part they were doomed to disappointment, for she only emitted a burst of laughter, and as the conclusion of the address applauded with the rest. Then Governor Dix arose amid cheers and said:

"I desire to say again, the vote of New York was cast for Governor Wilson." Mr. Stanchfield: "And no
