TRADE MORAL—This paper's advertising columns are the business news of the community. If you happen to need a new parlor carpet, you will be a lot more interested in a carpet ad. than in a paragraph about Jim Jones' newly painted barn. That's why everybody in this vicinity reads this paper's ads.

"Safe and Sane" Frolics for the Fourth

BY MARY DAWSON

THE most excitement loving youngster will never tire of the noisy and dangerous explosives which this year has come a thing of the past in thousands of homes owing to newly awakened conscientious objections on the part of parents to the proper substitutes for dangerous sports of former years is a children's alley party or a lawn fete which may begin early in the forenoon and continue until evening without having so much as a moment lagging.

To impress the national character of our day care again on the minds of the children a patriotic program of recitations could commence with the notes of invitation.

Let these be cut from cardboard or paper in the shape of a flag or of a map of the thirteen original states and each one should have a star. Let the invitations be written in red, white and blue combination.

"You are cordially invited to attend Frolics for the Fourth to be held at the Wilsons, 529 West street, July the Fourth, from 10 to 12 M. R. S. V. P.

Children love search games and when all the little folk are together even the smallest tots can search could feed off the fun. For it is surprising how many a little one can find in the porch, shrubbery or flower beds. Most of them will be the tiny stars and stripes which will be the favors of the table, but a certain number of wee flags of other nations should be included. The search begins on a signal given by a bell, whistle or horn and continues. The greatest number of flags found by any one person constitutes the winner and is found representing one point.

Another game for children, a version of a favorite old game, the flags are arranged in the center of the room in the preceding sport, each youngster holding a flag of different color. The hostess' mother or some other friend then tells a story in which all the different countries are considered, and each geographical sequence, however, is represented by a child whose flag he or she holds the child takes out when the name is mentioned. When "All the countries" is brought in the story is merry scramble for new seats ensues. Between each of the countries a recitation or national song in which all join would make an additional change.

Another flag game, different from those described, is a procession march in which the children, flag pins, these paper lanterns, bells, star-shaped pincushions, flag blotters and so forth.

In proceeding to the table let the children form in line for a grand march to the inspiring music of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

A soap bubble tournament is always a hit and if the children will blow their bubbles around twice and then send him all together to form them, eg embroidery will be provided only by the flag.

Another game on the same general plan is to have a number of flags surrounded with a rag doll's head representing Uncle Sam, the children being blindfolded and given a sharp pin, the one coming to the fancy of the designer and pinning it closest to the nose (which are very lightly embedded) being the winner. Or the flags may be fudged counts one point for the person hitting a flag, two points for the second over and over until a sore of the desired length has been placed.

Literature Time.

"What are you writing now?"

"My remembrances for my new book. I write my reminiscences."

"How about the prose outlook?"

"I'll do them next."

"And then?"

"Then I'll write the book."

Compensations.

"Have your own fruit in the clock making business, boy," some of your works always on strike."

"Yes, but I am never worried over the fact of my hands wanting an eight hour day."

Deaths at Grade Crossings

Gates and flagmen at grade crossings do not prevent accidents; more than two-thirds of the people killed at crossings in Massachusetts during the past year were warned of danger by gates and flagmen, according to statistics just published. The fatalities which occurred while gates were down or a warning was given, and it shows that many persons are killed by trains which they see approaching. The reports of the board of railroad commissioners also show that 1,500 persons were killed or injured at railroad crossings in the state during the year.

A lowered gate and a flagman on duty seem to be accepted by a majority as a dare under the obstruction and dart across the track in front of a locomotive. Those who make a slight miscalculation of distance and speed can expect only death or injury, and it would seem that the gates and flagmen are insignificant price to pay for life and sound bodies and limbs.

Recovering Lost Treasure

Sometimes, but very rarely, the treasure-hunters actually find the treasure. In novels they always find it, but not in real life. Among the outstanding exceptions to the rule of disappointment is the effort to recover the $5,000,000 in gold that went down in the British frigate Lutine off the coast of Holland over a hundred years ago. Captain Gardiner, who is in charge of the operations, believes that he is about to reach the treasure and that the only remaining obstacle is a great pile of solid sand. Everything had to be taken out of the ship and 401 bars of silver. Each gold bar weighs 144 troy ounces and the silver bars fifty pounds each. Captain Gardiner believes he will reach the ship within a month. July and he seems to have good reason for his faith.

Well Fitted.

"Why don't polar expeditions take horses?"

"Now how do you suppose horses could travel in those icy regions?"

"Why not? Isn't it an ideal place for old steins?"

Why Deep Streams Run Still.

Deep streams run still, you know, and why? Not because there are no obstacles, but because they altogether overflow those stones or rocks round which the shallow stream has to make its noisy way.—William Smith.

Useless Without Understanding.

We may be in the universe as dogs and cats are in our libraries, walking the books and hearing the sugarcadian, but having no inkling of the meaning of it all.—William James.

KENTUCKY WOMEN MAY NOW VOTE IN SCHOOL DISTRICT ELECTION

New Suffrage Law Passed By Recent Legislation Is Now In Effect in Kentucky--Campaign Of Education Inaugerated By Federation Of Women's Clubs.

Lexington, Ky.—The Education Department of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs has started a School Suffrage campaign which will continue throughout the month of July, August and September. By means of the press, the printed circular letter, the pulpit, Club and Child's League meetings—in fact, by every means possible, an effort will be made to influence the women of Kentucky in school matters of interest in public education.

The greatest effort will be made to have the subject presented at the various Teachers' Institutes, and a letter has been sent by the Education Department, of which Mrs. R. N. Roark, of Richmond, is Chairman, asking for a place on the Institute program for a School Suffrage speaker. Some of the leading women in each town of the state have volunteered to make the addresses without any expense to the local teachers: Mrs. Desha Breckenridge, Mrs. Maxon Mauly, Mrs. Harry Whitehouse, Mrs. Ben Bruce, of Morehead; Mrs. R. N. Roark, and Miss Bell Benson, of Richmond, Mrs. Ben Cowan, of Frankfort; Mrs. A. M. Harrison, Louisville, Desha Breckenridge, of Lexington.

Get Out the Vote.

It is the policy of the Education Department simply to work to get out a good vote for the school suffrage candidates, and to furnish, through the press and the Club organizations, such information about election laws as will enable all women to vote on the school question intelligently. No effort whatever will be made to work for any candidate, neither to back any special candidate; on the contrary, the most careful and persistent effort will be made to keep all political parties and candidates entirely out of politics."

Letters of Commendation.

Many letters have been received this week by the Department of Education of the K. F. W. C. C. from county superintendents and teachers. A superintendent from one of the Blue Grass counties writes as follows:

"The county school superintendents and progressive teachers of this county state more than any other class of people, the Kentucky Federation of School suffrage to women, for they have seen the need of the ballot in the state's crusade for better educational conditions. I believe, however, that the teachers feel as especially interested in among all women, the women who are their school patrons. It is my opinion that they will co-operate in every way possible to help which women to get on a large school suffrage vote.

"An earnest and continued interest and if the willing to work will soon bring about a realization of some of the dreams and ideals which the best women have possessed; more convenient school houses, more and better trained teachers and higher salaries, longer school terms and larger per cent of attendance, courses in Domestic Science, Manual Training and the Science of Agriculture, a curriculum that shall consider the needs of the individual child and thus contribute something practical to his development."

Suffrage Law Now in Effect.

The new granted suffrage to Kentucky women went into effect on the 12th of June. Women who are able to read the law, will be entitled to cast a vote in the August and November elections for members of the board of school questions, and are eligible to be elected members of the board or management of the
