Lexington.—The bill of fare at the county jail is not up to the standard deemed fit for some of the negro prisoners, and they sent a letter to County Judge J. Frey Scott, complaining of the food given them. The letter was immediately ordered an investigation. The complainants, with one voice, declared that the coffee was not strong enough and one prisoner said it did not have sugar in it. They complained generally that the food was not up to the district s standard of quality or quantity. On the strength of the complaints the same care and that he did not like the coffee, that it was not sweetened, that there was no sugar in it, and still another prisoner declared that there was no salt in it. Sentences in six different jails, and that the Lexington jail's food was the worst of them all. Prompt action was taken by Mr. Thornton, in fact of which the prisoners got their coffee and light rolls which he usually furnished the prisoners, and the sugar supply had run out for two days, but said that this had been removed. Deputy Jailer John Shanklin was notified that one of the prisoners who had made the complaint to the county judge had been granted 30 days' leave of absence, and that he would not serve a six months' term. All of the other prisoners except two of those who, either tacitly or in words indicated that they were satisfied with the fare.

Upon the committee making its report Judge Scott declared that the charge of prisoners was a routine one to a close in Federal Judge Carpenter's court in Chicago with a jury verdict of "not guilty." The jury spent twenty hours in deliberating on the case. Three ballots were taken.
