CHAPTER XV
In Which the Minister Barries the Dan
"My Mr. Elmer," said the minister, "I have just been thinking about the little girl who came to me last week, and how she was so much interested in the story of the coffin."

"Yes, she was a very good girl," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"Come up!" called Horace, "I must see you!"
"What for?" asked Seth.
"To see you about the matter of the coffin," said Horace.

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."

"I am sure she will," said the minister, "and I am sure she will be a great blessing to the church in the future."
