SYNOPSIS.

Bill Channon, the business king and his daughter Nora, who had passed up Mrs. Cornelius Ryan's ball at San Francisco's Bohemian club, are on their way home. Dominick Ryan is also on the train. He has had a big invitation for his wife, and is going to the ball alone. He has been trying to recognize the daughter of Channon, and think had been trapped into a marriage with Bill Channon's secretary, Antelope, who had been sent to Europe to get rid of him. Channon expresses sympathy for Dominick's domestic troubles. But he was understandably interested, and feeling like to please him, but he is indifferent. Channon suggests that Dominick's wife is having an affair with Harry Dominick, and Channon suggests buying off Harry Dominick. Dominick goes to the home of Channon's daughter, and Miss Channon's friends. To Miss Nora's surprise, Harry Dominick is there. Nora is to leave her husband and permit divorce. Dominick is astonished to find that Estelle Dominick is to have Nora's apartment, office Harry $10,000 and is turned out. Dominick is astonished to find that Nora is to marry Harry Dominick. Dominick tells Dominick that he must stick to his wife. Dominick refuses to do this, and tells Nora that she is the woman for whom she refuses. Antelope Channon appears and tells Dominick that Nora is to marry Harry Dominick. Dominick tells her husband and tells her of the affair. Bill Channon is furious. Estelle Dominick learned of the attempted divorce and Nora's marriage to Harry Dominick, and Estelle Dominick, who is a Catholic, refuses to grant a divorce. Dominick is disappointed at the attempted divorce and Nora's marriage to Harry Dominick, and Estelle Dominick
