CARLISLE . . . KENTUCKY.

Speaking of baseball, don't grow disheartened.

What's become of the old-fashioned woman who wore four petticoats?

China cut out opium and the United States should cut out the cigarette.

An eastern magazine is offering $1,000 for a new idea. But probably not for a rational one.

Still, the bow on the back of a man's hat might help him to steer a straight course if he schooled for the pursuing style next year. Cutaway in everything but the price.

Retribution does sometimes come in this world. Take a St. Louis lawyer was making the plea that acquitted his client of theft, the latter stole his watch.

That Judge must have been under some sort of a spell of peculiarness when he sharply reproved a woman in court for wasting one of those newly fashioned silk dresses.

His neighbors who have gardens no doubt are not very highly stirred over the fact that a Kentucky man has chickens as large as calves.

The world's record for number of passengers carried has just been broken by a biplane in France. This will encourage those who think the American machine are the most practical type.

Time to revamp that swat the fly slogan. Make the adjuration read, Swat the fan.

It is small wonder that the gas scandal in Germany has produced an explosion of indignation.

The Colorado farmer who has been fully indicted as worthy of the name, we are vaguely awaiting a full description of the characteristic advantages over those of the normal sort.

The Salvation Army lassie who shot herself with a 32-calibre pistol made a neat, tasteful job of it. Not wasting ammunition, and hasn't disfigured her face to a target street corner crowd.

You can always tell when a girl is now engaged to be married. She says affairly fed she invariably refers to her friends who have hitherto been her best pals and who she hopes will be her bridesmaids.

A Gotham business house has decided to eliminate affectionate addresses and brief, familiar expressions in its business correspondence. Yet in the way of letter writing ordinary persons are even dearer than they are called.

It will be impossible to shuffle tips," says Herr Ketchenmeyer, manager of a leading hotel in Berlin. All the guests cease to ask for special service," says a writer in a new book on sociology, with a few chapters on economics.

A statue of Venus fell on a New York man as he was trying to shove the goddess and knocked him down, hitting him so he had to be taken to the hospital. The signs of the times are growing more significant every day.

After wasting 15 minutes of our valuable time trying to figure it out, we have concluded that the proof reader was wholly at fault when he permitted the statement that the "bride's mother was charming in a blue shad," to slide through.
