Dr. GERALD DOWNER
Author of "THE FINGER"
"GOLDEN TALENT"

They entered slowly, four men carrying a fifth, their bodies swollen with pain from the heat of the fire. They were covered with soot, their faces pale and their eyes staring. One of the men was holding a child who was screaming in pain. The others looked on with expressions of grief and despair.

"About the other boys in the party, but he was not particularly over the loss of the boy." ...

CHAPTER I

"The other boy," said the woman, "has been taken to the hospital. He was found by a neighbor who saw him lying in the street." ...

"I think it is better that you should not see the boy," said the woman. "It would be too painful for you." ...

"But I must see him," said the woman. "I must know what happened to him." ...
